Monastery Beach plan shelved

State abandons parking lot

BY DAVID LELAND
SUSAN BECK

STATE PARKS officials on Wednesday abruptly dropped ambitious plans for a $800,000 parking lot at Monastery Beach, citing continued community opposition.

The announcement ends a six-year battle between residents and the state, which had leaned heavily on the area's land use plan that calls for removal of parking from the shoulder of Highway 1.

"My feeling is that after re-evaluation it is not a project that we want to go through with at this time," said Don Murphy, division chief of the state Park & Recreation Department. "People will park along the shoulder for now."

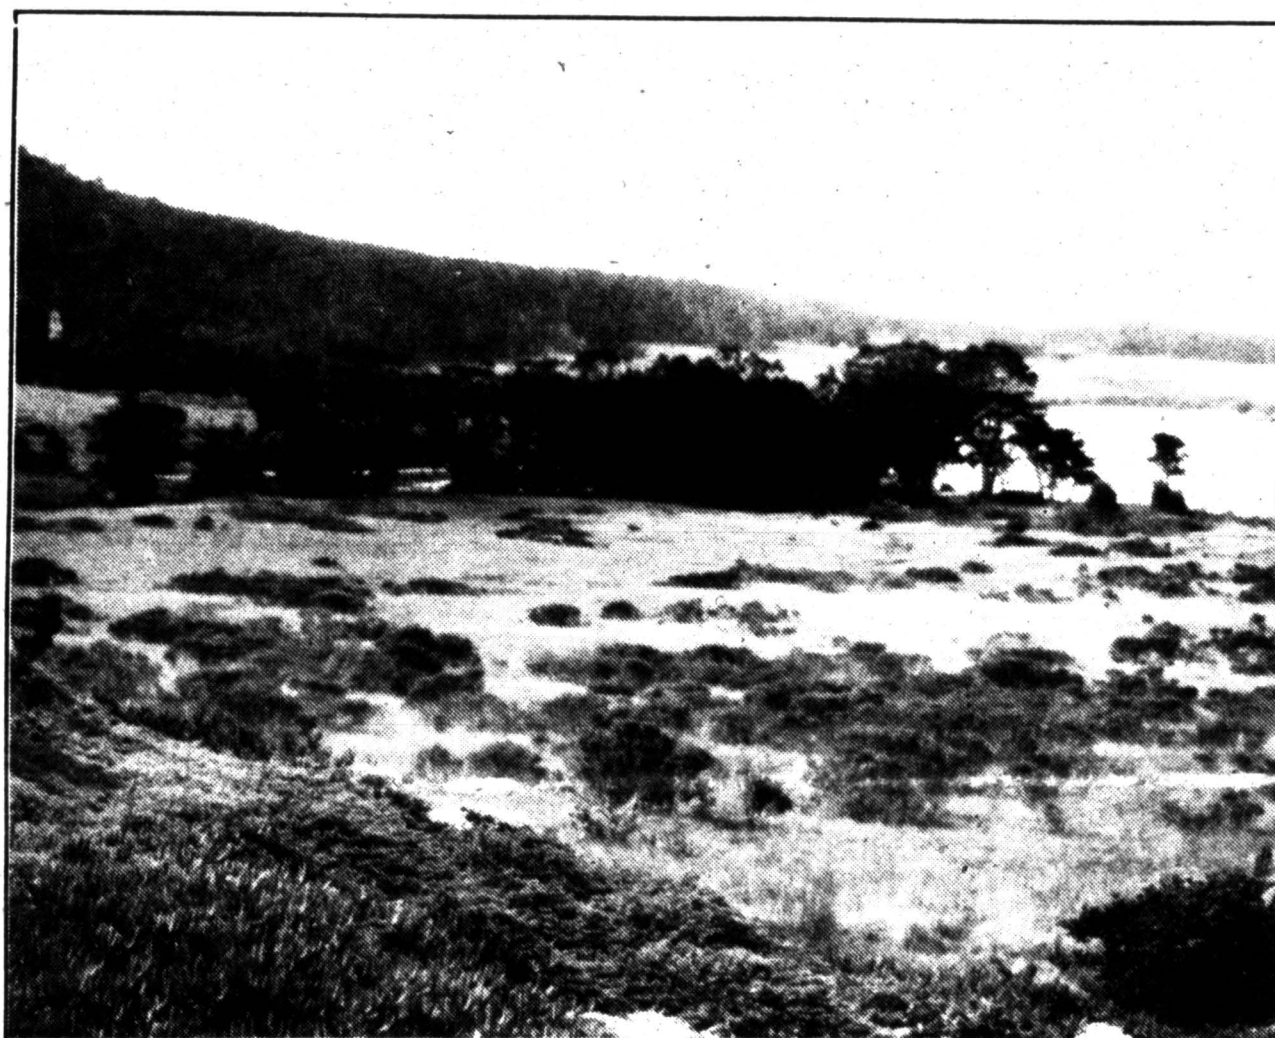

Murphy said his agency did not have an alternative plan at this time.

The surprising news caught 5th Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman off guard.

"It's an encouraging new attitude on the part of state parks," she said. "It shows that the importance of intense public participation especially at the beginning of how we can continue to do a good job."

Most recently the state had down-scaled plans for a double parking lot at the beach and sought a single, 75-lot affair in a grove of eucalyptus trees by Bay School.

However, during a public hearing

STATE PLANS for Monastery Beach would have seen a portion of this 150-year-old grove of eucalyptus trees near Bay School destroyed. As a result of the state dropping plans for the parking lot, beach-goers will continue to park on the shoulder of Highway 1. (David Leland photo.)

before county supervisors earlier this month, a plan by Carmel for off-shoulder parking received wide-spread report.

Those opposing the plan had continually pointed out that Caltrans had not found sufficient evidence of vehicle accidents caused by shoulder parking at the beach to warrant a paved parking lot.

Carmel officials lauded the decision made by Murphy, the former district supervisor for the Big Sur district, who was this month was promoted to director and now works in Sacramento.

"It's a great victory for the grassroots efforts such as Bay School, City of Carmel, scuba divers and the board of supervisors," said Doug Schmitz, city administrator. "I think it was a very tough decision being new on the job and rejecting a long-time plan. A lot of kudos should be sent his way."

While The Pine Cone was unable to contact Bud Whisler, who owns three cottages at the beach, his sentiments were made clear during a recent public meeting.

"We have been good custodians in preserving the land around the property, and we strongly support the Save Monastery Beach Coalition."

Last year the state Coastal Commission sided with the state Parks Department, but had remanded the plan back to the county for a last-ditch effort at a compromise.

The matter was due to return to the commission this spring.

At Bay School, which had fought continuously against the plan, the news was welcome.

"I'm really pleased with the decision," Joan Linch, director. "I appreciate all the hard work and dedication that went into the campaign to stop the plan."

"On behalf of the parents and children of Bay School, we are happy that there is not going to be a parking lot here and that the eucalyptus trees will remain."

Water district down to four options; dam still favored

By PAUL WOLF

ZEROING IN on what will eventually be a single long-term supply project, the peninsula water district has pared down its list of viable options from nine to four.

And the finalist is still most likely to be a new Los Padres dam on the Carmel River, whether or not the dam project would be launched in combination with a small desalination plant on the coast.

Nevertheless, the district has been under pressure from a variety of agencies to continue to study other alternatives before it comes up with its "overall preferred alternative" — a decision based on supply potential, cost, environmental impacts and many other considerations.

The district staff is now preparing to complete the final environmental impact report/statement (EIR/S) on long-range supply prospects. It is a document that will study four candidates and a no-project alternative, and will contain the final recommendation to the water board.

If all goes to plan, the board will choose from the following by late summer.

- A new 24,000 acre-foot Los Padres dam on the Carmel River.

- A new 16,000-20,000 acre-foot Los Padres dam on the Carmel River in conjunction with a three million gallons-per-day desalination plant at one of three locations on the coast.

- A Canada Reservoir and a possible 3 MGD desalination plant at one of the three sites.

The reservoir would be located near mid-Carmel Valley and would not a dam per se. Every winter, water would be pumped from the Carmel River to an open canyon about a mile away.

- A 7-10 MGD desalination plant and no dam.

The no-project alternative is a requirement of the California Environmental Quality Act.

One of the projects eliminated was a new San Clemente dam, which was actually rejected four years ago for environmental reasons. According to Henrietta Stern, district senior project coordinator, the option hasn't been a serious consideration for some time, but studying it in the draft EIR/S was a valuable exercise.

At present, district staff is starting the imposing task of responding to the voluminous comments and criticisms on the draft EIR/S. The comments were submitted last fall by various agencies and interested parties. The final EIR/S will include the responses to the draft EIR/S, revisions to the document, further study and a single recommendation to the board.

Near and long term

While at times it gets confusing, the simplest way to understand the water district's supply plans is to distinguish between the near term and the long term.

The near and the distant often get mixed up, and that is natural because there is some overlap. That is in the area of desalination: while desal is the focus of the short-term supply solution, it may also factor into a long-term equation.

This the case, the final EIR/S for long-term supply plans will use the information from the short-term supply review of a number of desalination alternatives.

In a separate desal EIR, the district is studying three coastal sites for a possibly plant, which would be completed many years before any dam alternative. A desal plant could be finished in as quickly as three years. It could be the Year 2000 before a dam is constructed.

Basically, the three locations for a desalination facility are next to the Moss Landing PG & E complex, near at the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency in Marina, and at a site in Sand City.

The desal EIR is scheduled to be released for public comment in April.

The district is expected soon to finalize June 2 ballot question asking voters whether the district should move ahead with expenditures for a final design on a desal project.

The way the short- and the long-term would dovetail is if the long-range project includes a small desal plant along with a dam. In such a case, the district would have laid much of the ground work with the short-term supply studies that focus on desalination.

Shrouded in fumes

Dear Editor:

In the Pine Cone issue of Jan. 2, Zad Leavy uses the argument that TO BUILD the freeway in Hatton Canyon would induce growth.

Then, three paragraphs later he said that NOT TO BUILD the road would leave us with "the very values which draw people to this area."

So, in either event he states the truth: more people will come here.

Let's enjoy the enormous, permanent, open spaces we already have, and go on with the construction of the freeway in the canyon, for the people who are already here.

We humans, and Mother Nature, need to be rid of the traffic jams shrouded in exhaust fumes.

Successful efforts

Dear Editor:

On Jan. 7 the Board of Supervisors approved a resolution to request the Coastal Commission to defer a decision on the Monastery Beach parking, and to initiate the amendment process for the Land Use Plan. Many thanks to them for the unanimous vote on this subject.

The Citizen's Coalition to Save Monastery Beach was made up of many, many people who helped to achieve the results just described. As Coordinator for the Citizen's Coalition, I want to thank all those who helped for your efforts, large and small.

The Coalition is particularly appreciative of the efforts of Mayor Jean Grace and the City Council of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and to Ms. Molly Erickson of the City Planning Department for a lot of hard work and leadership, and for the plan for development of improved shoulder parking at the beach. These efforts were a major factor in achieving significant results.

The articles in the local newspapers helped to arouse public awareness of the issues and this is very much appreciated.

The factor making the greatest difference was the expression by the public of concern over the issue, and the willingness of so many people to utilize the tools of democracy. Many thanks to each person for her or his participation.

Mentored by questing

Dear Editor:

WHEREAS (a beguiling word that lets one know that something is about to follow), all of us in lovely Carmel could be dining and lunching perhaps with Willis Harmon, or Robert McDermott, or Francis Moore Lappe' or Fritjof Capra and Jerry Mander and excitingly others, if, through a "window of chance" their projected symposium, hilltop in Carmel Valley is MENTORED by questing, creatively altruistic patrons/patronesses as donors for a "planned birth" of such a valued consortium of bright minds.

This has been slated for their necessary time-shared use for a long-awaited retreat, away from the city, so as to allow their follow-up and linkage of their ideas to a promise of action.

Then, and only then, with assist for global concern, will the same hilltop not be consummated into ownership of one big city lawyer.

Oh woe! If that were to happen, how I hear then, mingled in crescendo, a MENTORS' LAMENT along with my own Seller's Remorse.

A great getaway

Dear Editor:

We recently took advantage of an invitation to Carmel residents from Inns by the Sea to spend a night, free of charge, at one of their inns.

We were given a beautiful room with a fireplace and kitchenette at Svendsgaard's Inn. We were treated just like any paying guests by their friendly staff.

This also included a very nice continental breakfast delivered to our door and a two-for-one dinner at the Sea City Diner.

This turned out to be a double treat for us as we had a plumbing problem at our house and had no hot water.

We want to publicly thank Inns by the Sea for their most generous offer. It was a great getaway for us.

Names and supporting information should be sent to Citizen of the Year Selection Committee, P. O. Box 13, Carmel 93921, no later than Feb. 10. The winner will be announced at a celebration at the Scout House, at 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 23.

The Citizen of the Year award honors persons who have made an outstanding contribution to promoting the objectives of Carmel's Ordinance 96. That is the portion of the zoning code that states that Carmel is "primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city." Nominations can be of someone who lives in Carmel or in its sphere of influence.

Previous honorees were: 1990, Enid Sales, for historic preservation, particularly the First Murphy House and Flanders Mansion; 1989, Joyce Stevens, participant in important community causes for over 20 years; and, 1988, Councilman Jim Wright, for leadership in civic affairs and participation in local government.

The Award Selection Committee consists of the last two honorees, Enid Sales and Joyce Stevens; Jim Holliday, president of the Carmel Residents Association; and two CRA board members, Jane Mayer, longtime resident, and Clayton Anderson, originator of the award program.

Supes may pull 'trigger' on valley development

By DAVID LELAND

TRAFFIC CONDITIONS on Carmel Valley Road have deteriorated to the point where development in the valley may be deferred until the situation is remedied.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will grapple with the situation at its meeting scheduled for 10 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 28, at the courthouse in Salinas.

"It basically reiterates the Carmel Valley Master Plan," said Gerald Gromko, county public works director, referring to an interim ordinance the board will consider.

Still a rough draft at press time, the proposed ordinance would provide a fee structure to pay for the more-than $26 million in road improvements outlined in the Carmel Valley Road Improvement Plan, approved by supervisors in December.

Identified road improvements include four-laning of Carmel Valley Road ($14.5 million); Rio Road extension and signals ($1.7 million); Carmel Valley Road channelization ($1.6 million); Laureles Grade shoulders ($1.5 million); Laureles Grade passing lane ($3 million); and Carmel Valley Road minor interchanges ($4 million).

In its road improvement plan, the county suggests the following fee structure to pay for road improvements:

- $20,000 be assessed for each new lot.
- $15,000 be assessed for each new visitor unit.
- $10 per square foot of commercial building area.
- $15 for a discretionary permit.

Not included in the recommendation before the board is the formation of an assessment district for current Carmel Valley residents.

The master plan, adopted in 1986 to govern growth in the valley through the turn of the century, is quite clear that traffic must flow smoothly or building can be shut down.

The most recent study by public works indicates that, between 4 and 6 p.m., traffic on Carmel Valley Road between Schulte and Robinson Canyon roads has deteriorated to almost a standstill.

Carmel Valley Road between Laureles Grade and Ford Road is also experiencing congestion during peak hours, according to a public works report.

THE CARMEL City Council, Fire Chief Bill Hill and a handful of citizens toured a portion of the city this week searching for ways to minimize the threat of a catastrophic fire. An example where "everything has been done right for a fire-safe house" was seen at this new home on Vizcaino Avenue, where owners incorporated a fire-proof roof, fire-resistant walls and internal sprinklers. According to the fire department, less than 2 percent of Carmel residents have installed a residential sprinkler system, which provides the ultimate protection from a disastrous fire. ## City finances in good condition at mid-year

MIDWAY THROUGH the fiscal year, the city is holding its own against a recession-weary economy.

In truth, the optimistic mid-year report indicates that the city's revenues are actually increasing after a year of slow economic growth.

"We are in good fiscal condition, considering the economy," said Doug Schmitz, city administrator, adding that sales tax revenues increased in December and January compared to the previous year. "Considering the length and impacts of the recession, we are in a good position at the conclusion of the first six months of the fiscal year."

By collecting almost $1.6 million in hostelry tax through December, the city stands at 57 percent of its expected fiscal revenues.

"Over the past five years, the hostelry tax receipts have ranged between 53-58 percent of budget at mid-year," Schmitz said.

However, sales tax, reflecting a sluggish economy, are only 45 percent of the estimated budget, opposed to standing between 50-52 percent at this time during a healthy year.

Interest income from city investments is also bullish, according to the report, with the income standing at 56 percent of the anticipated budget.

Money garnered from the Pansini Corporation, which operates the parking lot at the north end of Sunset Center and for the underground parking garage at Fifth Avenue and Dolores Street is also ahead of projections, at 52 percent.

Through December, however, building permits stood at only 31 percent of their forecasted expectation for the fiscal year which ends June 31; commercial parking stall use permits at 23 percent; building trades permits at 20 percent; and planning permits at 63 percent.

Schmitz pointed out that, despite those low numbers, the local building industry is still doing better than last year.

"Building activity also appears to have picked up based on the December report," he said.

Despite the rosy report, Schmitz said he is still considering putting a temporary spending freeze on several programs and projects until later in the fiscal year.

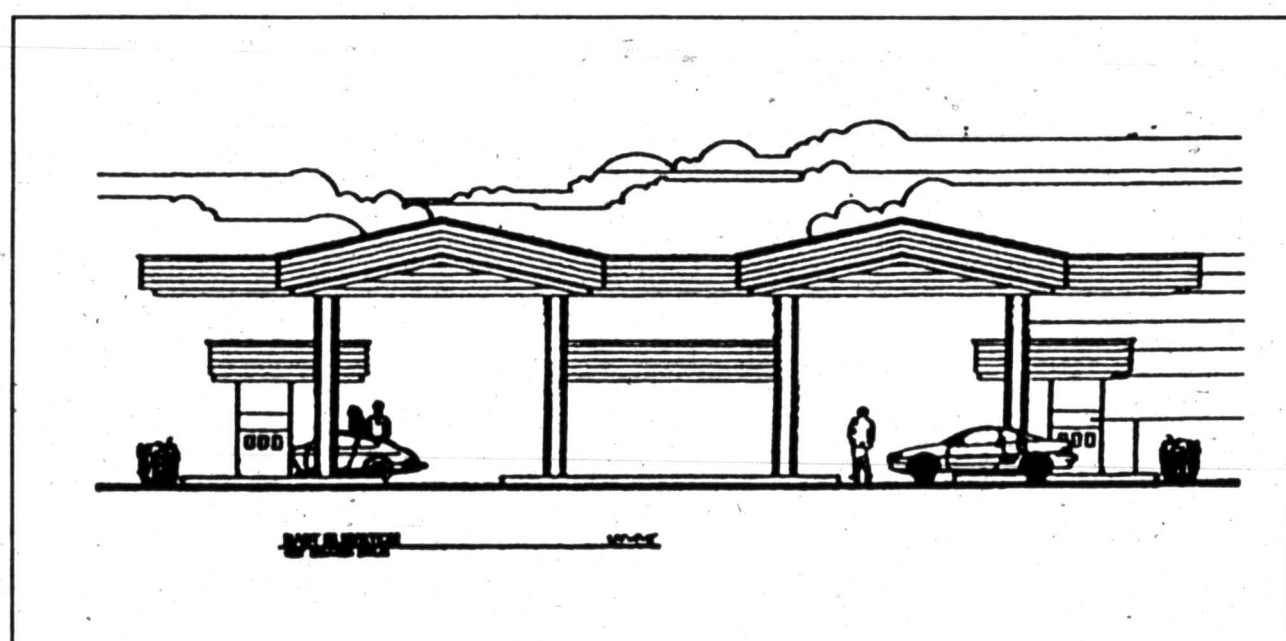

Schmitz said he is attempting to provide a "safety cushion," but was unsure which items the freeze would impact.

"I want to stress that the temporary hold is a precautionary measure which I consider a prudent move considering the overall economic climate," said Schmitz.

A definite decision on the cuts will be made after a report is written regarding the impacts of the Carmel City Council's decision to have a six-month trial period of two-hour parking in traditional one-hour zones in the commercial district.

Loss in parking fines from that endeavor is estimated to be about $36,000, Schmitz said.

COUNTY SUPERVISORS this week denied an application for a 24-hour Shell gas station at Rio Road, shown here in an artist's rendering.

Supes deny Rio Road service station

By SUSAN BECK

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors unanimously denied a request to put a 24-hour Shell gas station at Rio Road in Carmel Valley.

At the Tuesday, Jan. 21 board meeting, Carmel Properties Co. recommended that the supervisors approve a Combined Development Permit, which would include a Zoning Permit for a mini-mart with four gasoline pumps at the station.

The design included a 1,000 square foot building and four two-sided fueling pumps, a 640 square foot retail sales area, an office, two restrooms, utility and storage rooms.

The original plan was a full-scale operation with a carwash, six pumps, and allowed for the sale of alcohol, said Peter Salmons, board member of the Carmel Valley Properties Owners Association.

He said Shell agreed to downscale the station after opposition from valley homeowners, which was approved by the Monterey County Planning Commission on Dec. 18.

However, it was not scaled down enough, said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

She said the property comes under the jurisdiction of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, which dictates that the guiding principle is compatibility with residential use.

Arroyo Carmel and the Crossroads, where the gas station would be located, is a "mixed use area," and the job of the supervisors is to make sure that the business that occupies the lot is as compatible as possible to the neighborhood.

She said that the former Arco station alerted the residents to the problems of noise and contaminants. Residents from the neighborhood opposed the plan at the board meeting, and they were very well prepared, said Strasser Kauffman. She said they were professional and courteous: "They did a good job."

The motion for denial was made by Strasser Kauffman because the 24-hour mini-mart was not compatible, and the intensification of use on the property.

She said there are ample opportunities within walking distance for food or a cup of coffee.

The property still maintains the original 1969 use permit allowing for a gas station, but the situation has changed because of the residential property adjacent to the lot.

The owners can continue to pursue putting a station there, but any other business that is quieter and has limited use would be well received by the board said Strasser Kauffman.

She said, "Every gas station has to be on its best behavior because they are watched closely by the residents and the county staff."

City offers tree-saving tips at workshop

By DAVID LELAND

CONTRACTORS, ARCHITECTS, and designers gathered together this week for an informal workshop on how they can minimize tree damage when building homes in Carmel.

Held at the Scout House, the informal gathering saw about 60 building professionals on hand to garner knowledge.

"Construction is always injurious to trees, that's something you can't avoid," said City Forester Gary Kelly. "But there are things that can be avoided."

Root destruction, damage to tree trunks from heavy equipment and careful scrutiny as to where toxic materials are dumped were pointed out as examples of prudent building by Kelly.

In part, Kelly said, the workshop was scheduled in response to the Carmel City Council's recent adoption of increased penalties for contractors who destroy trees.

"We want to educate people in the construction business that we are here to work with them," said Kelly, adding that the penalty has increased from a 30-day suspension of a contractor's building permit to a maximum of 90 days. "We really don't want to be the enforcer or the heavy hand."

A total of 160 invitations were sent out, with about 60 of those responding, Kelly said.

The city is surely taking a conciliatory attitude toward the building industry.

"We want to learn from people in the industry," Kelly said. "We want to learn what we can do to make their job easier, while still protecting the environment."

Resident-business cooperation help lower crime rate, say police

By JOHN DETRO

NEW METHODS put into motion by Carmel Police Department helped reduce local crime substantially last year, the agency announced Wednesday.

An official statement from those quarters said "more serious crime" (including rape, robbery, burglary, auto theft, arson) was down 11 percent in 1991 as compared with the preceding year.

And "less serious crime" (vandalism, mealskips at restaurants, bad checks, so on) totaled 28 percent less than 1990 statistics.

"This reduction," the report said, "is the direct result of extra efforts made by members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the outstanding cooperation and assistance of the residential and business communities."

The news bulletin carried no names. However, such materials normally are prepared by Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras for approval from Chief Jack McGilvray. They and Police Capt. Don Fuselier were in an agency training session Wednesday at Laguna Seca conference facilities and unavailable for comment.

The statement continued: "Using a variety of methods, officers placed...a great emphasis on reducing reported crime during 1991. The development of a Business District Crime Prevention Program, use of footbeats, and a variety of crime prevention programs as well as proactive patrol tactics, combined to bring about the desired results."

Earlier this week, Poitras praised citizens whose telephone calls to the department helped officers nab two alleged purse-snatchers near Carmel Post Office. (See separate story this edition.) "That's the sort of response that lets criminals know they won't do well in our city," Poitras said.

It was fitting that Wednesday's workshop focused on the dynamics of team-building. Watch Commander William Uretsky said from headquarters that one-third of the work force at a time (10 officers) periodically gets involved in such training sessions.

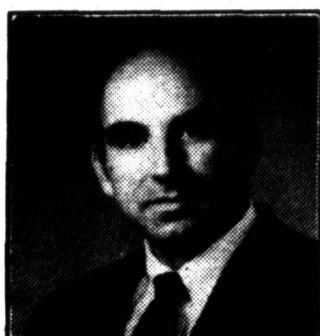

"These happen at different places," Sgt. Uretsky explained, "depending on logistical needs. Bit by bit, the entire department learns about new laws, dealing with people, new technologies, investigative procedure, defensive tactics, marksmanship, effective supervision, other tools."

Community involvement key to substance-abuse education

By DAVID LELAND

ALMOST A quarter century after drug usage became rampant in American society, health educators are still struggling to stifle the disease in young people.

Carmel, where the school district this year hired a drug-education specialist, is no different.

"We want to reduce the risks of young people getting involved with chemicals that will harm their bodies," explains Janell Malek, a public health nurse, who is overseeing the CUSD's Drug, Alcohol and Tobacco Education (DATE) program. "The best way to reduce drug use among young people is to direct our efforts at education and have clear policies."

Funded, in part, by a $28,000 state-federal grant, the program includes components that support prevention and early intervention, as well as discipline and referral.

The new regime is the byproduct of the over-zealous teachings of the '70s, which sometimes actually served to encourage children to experiment, and the low-key approach of the '80s.

"We are trying to help kids clarify their values and hope that they will come to the conclusion that drugs are bad for them," says Malek, who was initially hired by the district three years ago to oversee various health programs.

School curriculum involves appropriate educational programs for grades kindergarten through high school. Counselors also visit sites and teachers undergo comprehensive drug-education classes.

But perhaps the most innovative portion of DATE is its thrust toward home and community involvement.

Alternatives to dissection

IN VIEW of our continuing awareness of animal welfare issues, many students these days are expressing opposition to dissecting animals in biology classes. And many teachers are accepting these ethical objections by allowing alternate projects.

"Alternatives to Dissection," a teaching packet made available by the Humane Society of the United States, offers students and teachers a humane substitute to dissection. It contains lessons and activities designed to meet the educational objectives of dissection without harming animals.

Also included is a comprehensive list of resources including books, catalogs and teaching aides, such as plastic and fabric models, computer simulated dissections, and computer programs for conducting experiments.

ANEMIC CATS

Did you know that fleas can cause anemia in cats? Certain parasites live in the blood streams of animals and can bring about the destruction of red blood cells. These parasites can be transmitted to your pet by insects that bite or suck blood, like fleas, ticks, mosquitoes and mites.

One such parasite is hemobartonella. It attaches to the edge of the red blood cells, giving them an unusual shape. The cat's spleen destroys these odd cells, which results in severe anemia, yellow mucus membranes and an enlarged spleen. These changes typically make the pet depressed, weak and feverish, and you may notice that your cat's eyes are yellow.

Hemobartonella in cats is called feline infectious anemia and most commonly affects young male cats. It is responsible for 10 percent of all feline anemia cases.

Infected cats must be treated or the disease can be fatal. Treatment usually includes oral antibiotics and steroids.

Like malaria in humans, the hemobartonella parasite remains in the blood stream of the carrier animal even after the pet recovers from anemia. Relapses can occur, especially if the cat is stressed, but otherwise there are no symptoms to indicate that the pet is a carrier of the parasite. Hemobartonella cannot be transferred to humans.

Be sure to have your cat checked by a veterinarian every six months or so, to ensure his physical well-being, and be sure to run a blood test to check for anemia.

WHY DOES YOUR CAT PURR?

Most people would say the answer is obvious: Cats purr because they are happy and contented. Surprisingly, that is not always true. Cats also purr when they are in pain, injured, in labor, and even dying. It seems that purring signifies a friendly social mood. In the case of a traumatized cat, it may indicate a need for friendship or, with a happy cat, it may be his way of saying thanks for kindness given.

That's it for this time. See you next week!

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

Vote for the Greens/Part II

THE VAST array of tantalizing salads is endless with all the possible taste combinations of the variety of oils, vinegars and dressings that adorn the greens. When selecting oils we find we have choices of vegetable oils such as: soya, sunflower, safflower, coconut, corn, peanut, rapeseed (canola) and grapeseed, avocado, mustard, pumpkinseed, cottonseed, sesame, palm, the indispensable olive oil, and the nut oils (walnut, hazelnut, almond, pistachio and pine seed).

Storage of oil is important so that oxidation is slowed so that the oil does not become rancid. Store covered in a dark and cool place. If storing in the refrigerator, which prolongs the life, the oil may become opaque.

In this day and age when we are concerned with cholesterol one leans to selecting olive oil and the low saturated fat oils. However with all these choices more doors open up when you realize that you can make or buy herb-infused oils.

HERB INFUSED OILS

To make one quart of herb oil. Chop 1/2 cup of herbs (such as basil, cilantro, thyme, rosemary, dill, sage, oregano, etc.) and put in blender with 1/2 cup of oil blend and then add this mixture to 3 cups of oil, pour into covered jar and let steep for 10 to 20 days, then strain through a cheesecloth or coffee filter and store covered. For variations add crushed spices, chilies, garlic, shallots etc. with the chopped herbs. This should keep about 2 to 3 months. (Some quickly blanch the chopped herbs to retain the bright color. I also save the herbs after they are strained off and rub on chicken or fish.)

Now for some discussion on vinegars. Vin aigre (French), which means "sour wine", is broadly defined as a liquid consisting of dilute acetic acid. They are obtained by a double fermentation process. Vinegars are best stored at room temperature, covered and in a dark place. Ah, the difficult selection process again...shall I use a wine vinegar (champagne, sherry, red or white), the wonderful Italian balsamics from Modena, a cider, spirit malt or rice. Then there are the flavored vinegars such as the herb-infused or fruit. Like the oils one can make their own flavored vinegars.

HERB-INFUSED VINEGARS/ FRUIT VINEGARS

For 1 quart of vinegar. Heat 4 cups of wine vinegar to simmering point and pour over 2 cups of washed chopped herbs of choice. Let stand covered for 10 to 20 days. Strain through a cheesecloth or coffee filter into sterilized bottles and cork or cap. Can also put a sprig in the bottle. For fruit vinegars substitute 2 cups of ripe fruit (such as berries, pears, peaches, etc.) that have been cut into small pieces, and bruised by stirring with a spoon to release flavors but not completely mashed.

The task of combining these oils and vinegars is at hand or should I say the wrist with a whip and bowl (a blender ends up creating a thicker emulsion). The standard vinaigrette has been one part vinegar or lemon juice to two or three parts oil, a little freshly ground salt and pepper, a little Dijon mustard. However, it is really a matter of your own taste. Sometimes a very fine balsamic vinegar may need very little oil. The creative process is in your hands to mix and match oils, vinegars, mustards, herbs, flowers, fruit, spices etc.

With the addition of adding either egg yolks and or whole eggs and changing the proportions of oil and vinegar, mayonnaise is obtained. Making your own mayonnaise as with the oils, vinegars and vinaigrettes can have many variations, by adding mustard, garlic, shallots, herbs etc.

BASIC MAYONNAISE (BLENDER OR FOOD PROCESSOR)

Yields about 1-1/2 cups. Combine one egg, 2 tsp. vinegar or lemon juice salt and white pepper to taste in the jar of a blender or the bowl of a food processor with the steel blade. Cover and blend for a few seconds to combine, then with machines still on slowly pour one to one and a half cups of any oil (try olive oil, or half mild oil and half a strong nut oil). The less oil that is added the softer the mayonnaise will be. For a dressing, I usually thin out the mayonnaise with more vinegar or lemon juice or sometimes with a little milk. Transfer mayonnaise to a bowl and the canvas is now yours to go wild with.

A couple of years ago I entered a spinach salad contest which I was lucky enough to win a trip on the Orient Express, so I thought I would include the recipe called Popeye Salad since it had olive oil, sweet peas, and mussels.

Ingredients (per plate):

1 cup spinach
5 mussels in shells (that have been steamed in white wine, shallots, basil and cilantro and chilled)
1/4 cup peas

CUSD drug-education program

"The school acts as a catalyst," explains Malek, adding that parent education is of prime importance.

To that end, the CUSD will present drug-counseling experts Marie Retherford and Katherine Weller from 7-9 p.m. during the week of Feb. 11 at Carmel High School. The curriculum will center on recognizing drug behavior in teenagers and better communication skills. The cost is $40 per couple and $30 for singles. For more information call 624-3544.

Later this year, "Preparing for the Drug-Free Years" will be offered to parents of Carmel Middle School parents.

Overseeing the CUSD efforts is the Health Advisory Committee, which is composed of school personnel, law enforcement agencies, parents, business owners, church groups and local professionals.

Malek adds that Carmel's drug-alcohol problem is no worse than any other community.

"Drug use anywhere can't be measured, but we see enough evidence to be concerned," says Malek, who earlier this year began educating parents to the reality that LSD is making a comeback.

Of prime concern to Malek is the idea that some parents still consider alcohol to be socially acceptable and OK for kids to imbibe upon.

But CUSD administrators say they are encouraged by early results.

"We do have evidence that we are beginning to affect members of the community," says Marvin Biasotti, director of pupil/personnel services. "More students are deciding they are not going to use."

City Council to hear commercial zoning recommendations Jan. 28

THE CARMEL City Council will review and discuss the planning commission's commercial zoning study during a special meeting next week.

The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 28, in the council chambers at city hall.

After perusing the document, the council may provide policy direction.

The planning commission's intent in preparing the study, which is more than a year in the making, was to:

- Update the city's code and general plan to reflect community needs and values.
- Remove cumbersome elements from the code.
- Remove inequities from the code.
- Simplify and streamline the application process.

The planning commission began review of the commercial zoning last January, and eventually conducted eight meetings on the subject.

Golf & Travel

By Ray A. March

Hong Kong pleasures

THIS TIME last year we were suggesting domestic travel options during Desert Storm. The best bets with a foreign flavor were in San Francisco, especially the Mandarin Oriental, Tommy Toy's and the Asian Art Museum.

It's purely coincidental, but we're back again with more on travel with an Asian flavor. This time it's Hong Kong and San Francisco. What a difference a year makes.

Those who have been there will understand when we say it takes a day or two to adjust to Hong Kong. It's not the 14-hour flight, three movies and four quarts of drinking water it takes to get there. It's the unexpected impact the city has on first timers.

Sure, Hong Kong is a city of contrasts; old world and new, rich and poor, a grand mix of British expats and hard working refugees, downtown basement bars featuring Scottish Loch chilled or baked right next to street-level Chinese restaurants lit up like Macys at Christmas, a city on the brink of China's rule. Hong Kong is also the city of the future. It's a trade city, a city of commerce where even culture becomes consumerism. As someone once wrote, it's straight out of the movie "Blade Runner."

See for yourself. Each evening at dusk head for the penthouse Harlequin Bar at the Mandarin Oriental. Not only is the view of the city's high rises and Victoria Harbor mesmerizing; the Petrossian caviar and iced vodka makes it a perfect wedding. A romantic perspective, if you will.

Another great seat for watching the "architectural action" by night is "level eight", as they say, at the Conrad's Pacific Bar. (You expect mini space ships to spurt out of the Bond Centre building anytime).

The Conrad is the international subsidiary of Hilton Hotels USA, but there's a difference — on the upper side of the scale. From its perch at Pacific Place not only is the view in any direction stunning, so are all its appointments.

Hong Kong is constantly recreating itself, and the year-old Conrad is a perfect example. Pacific Place is a high rent, prestigious business and shopping complex. Corporate headquarters, restaurants, more shopping, are only an elevator's ride from the main lobby.

Back to the Mandarin Oriental, momentarily. It's easy to see why this hotel is considered one of the best in the world — along with its sisters in S.F., Bangkok and Singapore. It's the service. Underline that. Laundry ordered for next day delivery comes back the same day it went out. No extra charge for one day service. Freshly starched hand towels at turndown. In the Mandarin Grill, unobtrusive tableside attentiveness. No speeches about luncheon specials. On and on. If the Mandarin seems older, less splashy, that's its tradition.

Last November President Bush, on CBS news beamed to the Far East, said "What recession?" Could he have been thinking of Hong Kong instead of the U.S.?

Not necessarily important trivia, but at least puzzling: On United flights to Japan, tomato juice is the most popular drink. On flights to China and Hong Kong, apple juice is most in demand. "I don't know why," a stewardess explained.

The Mandarin Revisited

Back in San Francisco.

The Mandarin restaurant has been a fixture for more than 20 years. Cecilia Sun Yun Chiang took the risk and became the leader in the preparation of northern Chinese cuisine when she moved from Polk Street to the ornate and lavish dining rooms at Ghirardelli Square. When was it? 1968?

She was doing her own shopping for fresh vegetables along Grant Street years before Alice Waters had an inkling of what locally grown ingredients can do for a dish.

Mandame Chiang set the standards for what quality and exciting Chinese cooking should be in this country. She's retired now and the restaurant has been sold, but that's not the end of the tale.

A recent visit to The Mandarin brought back old memories; of course, and happily Mamdame Chiang's influence is still there and the food is just as exciting as ever. If there is a drawback, it's the size of the restaurant. Extravagant space was once popular, but today The Mandarin seems to have seen its time — but only from an interior design point of view.

Don't be dissuaded. The Mandarin minced squab, Mongolian beef in a noodle basket, Yin-Yang prawns, asparagus with mushrooms and Mandarin glazed bananas are excellent. This is where real northern Chinese cooking began, and this is where it remains.

Shirley Fong-Torres

While on the subject of Chinese food, pick up "San Francisco Chinatown, A Walking Tour." This book is by Shirley Fong-Torres, the tireless "Wok Wiz."

"San Francisco Chinatown" gives the history and personal insights into S.F.'s most colorful neighborhood. Using maps, Ms. Fong-Torres describes how to find more than 50 different points of interest in Chinatown. She gives recommendations on how to see Chinatown by walking, and where to eat. There's even instructions on how to use the book, plus great recipes in the back.

Martin Yan writes in the preface: "It is a timely expression of a talented, resourceful, and knowledgeable professional, and most certainly a valuable and enjoyable resource for anyone interested in Chinatown."

We agree.

Hawaii Golf

An update on American Hawaii's golf cruise. The cruise, which is April 25 through May 2, offers various golfing opportunities, including a tournament and golf sessions.

Signed on to discuss how to choose the proper equipment is Raymond Chester, manager of Lake Chabot Golf Course in Oakland, and Dr. J. Mitchell Perry, author of "Unleash Your Greatest Potential," discussing mental conditions needed for optimum level of performance. Fans of the Los Angeles, or is still Oakland, Raiders will remember Chester's name. Chester will be playing in this year's AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am.

Of course, as previously mentioned, George Fuller, author of "Hawaii Golf," will tell about how to get on Hawaii's golf courses and what to expect before teeing off. This cruise holds all the promise of an unusual golfing vacation. For more information call 800-765-7000.

Gates hearing set for Feb. 11

By SUSAN BECK

DONALD GATES, 74, owner of the Cachagua Mutual Water Co., is out of jail.

Bail was set at $25,000, and Gates is to appear in court on Tuesday, Feb. 11 to determine if he is in violation of probation, said Brenda Smart, court clerk.

He was arrested for failing to appear in court on Thursday, Jan. 16. Superior Court Judge William Wunderlich put him on probation in May for not complying with the court's order to bring the water system up to the Monterey County Health Department's standards and for selling securities without a permit.

Wunderlich warned Gates in May that any failure of probation would be treated, "with great severity." He could possibly be sentenced up to three years in state prison.

Gates claims that the water system is fully restored. "All seven wells plus a spring provides plenty of water to the homeowners." He said it cost him $10,000.

"I think there is a lot of confusion and different points of view, which are rather narrow," said Gates. "Last year when the pipes broke, the residents went into a panic and hired an attorney. It's all an emotional thing."

In December 1990 a number of water pipes froze when the temperatures reached a record low in the area. Most of the residents were without water for several days and some for over a month.

When Gates refused to fix the system, the residents reported him to the Monterey County Health Department who subsequently provided bottled water with a $5,000 state grant.

It was also discovered that the main source of water to the residents was supplied by a well that was in complete disrepair.

In addition, Gates was charged with violating state securities laws. About 10 years ago he started selling lots in Cachagua and, without a permit, he sold shares in the mutual water company worth $5,000.

Superior Court Judge William Wunderlich handled the criminal case in May and placed Gates on felony probation.

Bud Tucker, a homeowner, said that Gates was given until the middle of December to take care of everything.

Only the wells, which were repaired by the residents, had been finished. Gates did pay for the work, said Tucker, but none of the other 14 items listed to bring the system up to Title 22 standards, such as putting exposed pipe underground, had been done.

Gates is now acting as his own attorney, and prior to being jailed he said, "I don't mind going to court. I plan to educate the people about the system. It's all based on feelings. I look at it as a rather minor problem, actually. I would be happy if they (residents) weren't upset. If it's ignorance of the situation, I will be happy to clear up the matter."

On Jan. 3, Superior Court Judge Richard Silver ordered him to pay $5,000 in legal fees to Jane Haines of Pacific Grove, who represents the residents, and to set aside $3,000 for the water company to use for emergencies such as the freeze last year.

Before being arrested, Gates was given an opportunity to sit down with Deputy District Attorney Doug Matheson, Diane Popowski, deputy county council, Haines, and several of the water company's homeowners to work out a solution to the discrepancies in Gates efforts to meet the courts demands.

Judy Highley, the court appointed water system operator, which Silver ordered necessary last year, said that Wunderlich and Silver made every possible effort not to put Gates in jail.

"Mr. Gates is still saying he doesn't have the money to make repairs," said Highley, "however, he owns real estate in various places in California. We feel it's not financial, but that he does not want to do it. He doesn't appear to realize the necessity of meeting the court deadlines."

The main concern for the homeowners now is that unless the court decides to protect the water company there is nothing they can do if he just leaves.

Both Tucker and Highley said that the homeowners are very disappointed with the situation. Gates made promise after promise, which never happened, and both agreed that even the courts don't seem to be able to get him to take care of business.

Peninsula Palate

Dressings:

Olive Oil Vinaigrette: Extra virgin olive oil (ratio 2/3), balsamic vinegar (ratio 1/3), with about 1 TBSP. each of chopped basil and cilantro added to 1/2 cup of vinaigrette.
Red Bell Pepper and Ginger Mayonnaise Dressing: 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 large red bell pepper (roasted), 1 TBSP. crystallized ginger, pinch of salt and a little half and half to thin. Combine all ingredients in blender.

Saffron and Curry Mayonnaise Dressing:

1 cup mayonnaise, pinch of saffron diluted in 2 TBSP. hot water, 1 TBSP. curry powder, 1/2 tsp. turmeric, 1 tsp. sugar. Combine all ingredients in blender and thin with half and half if needed. Should just coat the back of a spoon.

Garnishes:

Seasoned pinenuts — 1 tsp.
 Per Plate: Fried Chinese Bean Threads — 1/2 cup
 Edible flowers such as pansies — 4-5 flowers

Assembly:

On bottom of a dinner size plate, put about 2 TBSP. of each creamy dressing in any pattern (I did a ying yang design). Then in a separate bowl, toss spinach, and peas in vinaigrette and place in center of plate on top of dressings, but exposing the pattern. Then place the mussels in shells in a propeller pattern around spinach. Then sprinkle garnishes on top.

This salad was designed as an entree salad and even though it may be too time consuming to do easily in the home, parts are simple and fast. I felt this would be a good example to show that one can combine several dressings in a salad as well as showing that one can make almost any flavored mayonnaise. Be experimental, you might just be pleasantly surprised.

Make a child's wish come true

Chess for Kids program offered

If you are tired of your child playing video games day after day, perhaps you can interest them in learning how to play chess. The City of Monterey Recreation and Community Services Department offers a unique alternative for your child, Chess For Kids.

The program is for children K through sixth grade, is now taking registration for the winter/spring session. Classes will be on Tuesdays from 5:30-6:30 p.m. starting Jan. 21, 1992.

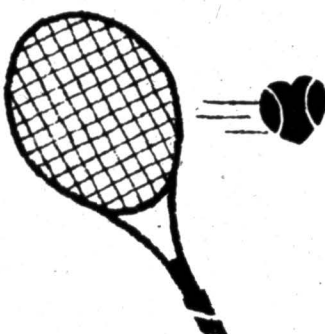

For registration information, please contact the Monterey Recreation and Community Services Department at 646-3866.

If the shoe fits...

IN A continuing tradition established last year, the Carmel Residents Association recently awarded Certificates of Appreciation to resident-serving business, The Village Shoe Shop, located on Red Eagle Lane. Owner Nancy Stephens, here receiving her certificate from Barbara Livingstone of the CRA, has provided shoe repair services to the community in a "courteous, fast, and efficient manner." The certificates are given by the CRA Board of Directors to honor those who do a good job of maintaining the qualities that help make Carmel-by-the-Sea a special place to live and to encourage greater patronage of local businesses by residents.

By Barbara March

Musicale

THE BEACH can be seductive on a June in January Sunday afternoon in Carmel unless the symphony is performing. The lure of trumpeter Adam Gordon, computer composer Joel Chadabe and Gustav Holst's The Planets filled Sunset Center to capacity for Concert III of the 46th season of the Monterey County Symphony.

Concert sponsors, benefactors, patrons, contributors, donors, supporters, members, friends and assorted music lovers applauded Gordon's performance of Hummel, had mixed reactions to Chadabe (some said his music sounded New York at rush hour) and emerged into the dusk of a balmy, full moon evening after a trip to The Planets by Holst.

The night before, the world-renowned Cleveland Quartet gave an intimate concert for Youth Music Monterey supporters at the dramatic cliff-side home of Jerry and Jo Barton in Big Sur. Sculptor Emile Norman chose a seat square in the middle of the audience and waited, while the rest of the group chatted and toured the Barton home.

When the Quartet began to play the frequently quoted words of Youth Music Monterey founder Ruth Fenton came to mind.

Ruth once said, "Music is the soul of a child."

Because the venues are varied and often far flung, it's sometimes hard to accurately count how many people actually support musical events on the peninsula. But judging by the fervor of the audiences and their commitment to attending performances, in spite of unseasonably beautiful weather or a night-time drive down the sometimes treacherous Big Sur highway, the performing arts are flourishing in antiquated auditoriums and private homes. To take a liberty and paraphrase Ruth, music seems to be the soul of the Monterey Peninsula.

THE BIGTOP

The "Village Affair" is outgrowing its home, Los Laureles Lodge in Carmel Valley. Dirk Oldenburg, managing director of Los Laureles and Stonepine, was strawboss for the evening, and hustled from the Lodge public rooms to the oversize tent and back again, walkie talkie in hand muttering, "bigger tent, next year we need a bigger tent."

Meanwhile in the tent they were turning off the heat lamps while Valleyites took advantage of the situation to bump into friends and neighbors. Literally. One woman said she wished she could make herself smaller so she could get to the Ridge restaurant oyster table.

The fire marshal is strict and will only allow 500 people onto the grounds of Los Laureles for the "Village Affair." Thank God. The 500 who attended this year bulged out the sides of the food and wine tent, and then spilled over into the Lodge where they bid on a vast array of silent and live auction items. Joan Voss had taken photos of all the gift certificate items making it easy for people to picture what they were bidding on.

The "Village Affair" committee chalked up another successful event but perhaps they should consider a change of location for next year to accommodate more people. Or see if the Barnum and Bailey bigtop is available.

GOURMET GALA POST MORTEM

Actor James Brolin was a last minute walk-on celebrity

GLORIA MCPHERSON and Enid Rauber know the hospitality business. They both agreed the "Village Affair" extended a warm valley welcome to all who attended. (Ray A. March photo.)

Today, in addition to being an actor, director and producer Brolin owns two coffee and tea shops on the peninsula and recently added a bookshop.

He says, "I like characters who are strong, independent and dangerous." My kind of man.

Coast & Country

My ol' buddy, Verne Lanegrass, the "Hollywood Chef," is no stranger to the "Gourmet Gala" circuit. (We once seanced together). He gave high marks to the desserts at this year's event and went on to say he had just come from the New Orleans "Gourmet Gala" where the food didn't compare to Monterey's.

Barbara Buss, director of development of the South Bay Chapter of the March of Dimes, told "Coast & Country" the celebrity concept has been scrapped in some cities (there are "Gourmet Galas" nationwide). Instead business and community leaders are recruited to participate and their friends and colleagues come out to watch them cook. Will the Monterey Peninsula "Gourmet Gala" follow the CEO trend next year or continue the celebrity charade?

Where does the money go? Grant recipients of March of Dimes funds include Natividad Medical Center, Monterey Bay Spina Bifida Support Group, Monterey C-Pals, Santa Cruz Women's Center, Westside Community Clinic, La Familia Center and the Monterey County Health Department.

PEEPS

Dennis Mills, vice president and general manager of Highlands Inn is the new president of the Monterey County Hospitality Association. His motto for the year is, "heart of a servant."

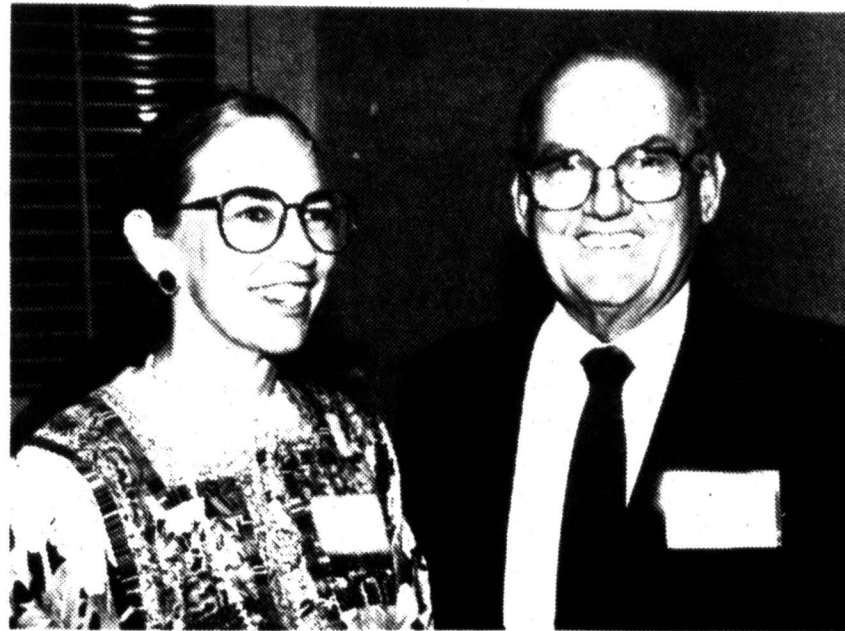

He explained, "Heart of servant means we really care. We're here to serve and it's not above our dignity to help, aid and inform our visitors." Mill's concept is refreshingly simple.

"It's time to believe in hospitality. We should come to work because we want to, not because we have to. It's time we had some perspective on what the hospitality industry is all about; caring."

CATH MCCARTHY, Lynsey Salyer and Marie Lupo were among those who attended the "Gourmet Gala First Annual Book signing, Tea and Home Tour" at Gallatin Powers estate, now the home of Steve and Dolores Gunia. (Chris Hulse photo.)

DOLORES GUNIA and Kirsten Bindel have a historic connection. Dolores lives in the former Gallatin Powers home and Kirsten and her husband David own and operate Bindel's restaurant, formerly Gallatin's in Monterey. Bindel's provided catering for the "Gourmet Gala First Annual Book signing, Tea and Home Tour." (Chris Hulse photo.)

Smothers to look forward to.

Judy Woodruff, chief Washington correspondent for "The MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour" will be the speaker at this year's "Annual Meeting of the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and The Auxiliary" on Jan. 25. Woodruff is well qualified to speak in this presidential

SOOTHSAYER

No, you haven't tuned into the astrological column by mistake. In case you missed this year's "KAZU Psychic Fair and Prediction Party" here are a few general predictions for the coming year, courtesy of Joyce Day Meuse.

"Expect a major period of exploration and innovation that stretches people far beyond their horizons in the arts, sciences, religion, medicine and human rights.

"Expect huge advances in the field of engineering which will eventually yield a new form of transportation.

"In medicine, AIDS research will not only yield an immunization for the deadly disease perhaps this year, but also breakthroughs on about four to six other nasty viruses and an incredible amount of genetic technology.

"The current recession will eventually cause a redistribution of money.

"In October of 1992 we have a repeat of the dynamic aspects that occurred in October of 1989 when we had the big earthquake. Have your earthquake readiness kits in order.

"The thing not to do is to try and retain the status quo." Amen.

Into the Rabbit Hutch

IT'S NOT that often that a student manages to defeat his or her teacher in a contest, but this was the case on January 4 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds. Carmel High freshman Erica Larson entered her two rabbits in the same rabbit show as her ROP teacher, Liz Meyenberg. Erica's Mini Rex rabbit, Louie, beat Mrs. Meyenberg's grand champion Mini Rex, Tom. Not only was Mrs. Meyenberg pleasantly surprised, but so was Erica!

Rabbit shows are a lot like cat shows — rabbits are judged on conformation and the condition of their coats. A Mini Rex is a breed of rabbit characterized by its smallness (about four pounds) and its short, velvety coats. A grand champion rabbit is one that has won three classes and has been registered with the American Rabbit Breeders' Association (ARBA). There's more to this story, however. Erica's Louie won "Best of Variety," meaning Louie was the best castor-colored (brown) Mini Rex at the show. Louie won third place in the "Best of Breed" class. What is really ironic is that Louie is Tom's son and Erica bought Louie from Mrs. Meyenberg! It was also Louie's first show.

Erica became interested in rabbits as a result of taking Mrs. Meyenberg's animal care class. "I never thought about them (rabbits) before," Erica said with a smile. Erica bought her first rabbit Eva, a gargantuan French Lop, at a rabbit show in Pleasanton, California, in October. Once she got home, Eva developed a biting habit that Erica has had to deal with. Eva was also shown at the Monterey show where she won her class.

Erica decided, however, that she wanted a smaller rabbit, so she decided on a Mini Rex. "I wanted a pet instead of one who bites," Erica explained. Hence, Louie came to live at the Larson abode.

Erica's dad was a little less than thrilled when Erica brought Eva home, but rabbits always seem to melt hearts (and no's!). Mr. Larson now thinks Eva is okay, according to his daughter, and he loves Louie.

Erica plans to keep on showing Eva and Louie. Two shows she is definitely shooting for are the Salinas Valley Fair in May and the Monterey County Fair in August, where Louie and Tom will probably meet again. Another father-son, teacher-student "showdown" will ensue, and the outcome will, no doubt, be interesting.

Enjoy watching the SuperBowl on giant screen TVs and help Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula at the same time. The fourth annual SuperBowl Spectacular is coming to the Doubletree Hotel on Sunday, Jan. 26. The $10 donation to Meals on Wheels promises to provide the best view of the SuperBowl outside Minneapolis.

Fun, football and food will mix as hundreds of fans make this year's fund-raising event more exciting than last year's. The 750-capacity De Anza Ballroom at the Doubletree in downtown Monterey will be transformed into a football stadium, complete with pennants, posters and banners of all 28 National Football League clubs. Football cuisine will also be available, including: fried chicken, burgers, hot dogs, nachos, popcorn, soft drinks and beer.

Kick-off begins at 3 p.m., but pre-game festivities start earlier with a Tailgate Party in the hotel lobby beginning at 1 p.m.

Fans will be entertained by the Seaside High School cheerleaders, the Mike Marotta Band and the 9x12-foot screens.

Sponsored by ANCHA, KMST-TV, and KWAV Radio, local on-air personalities will help raffle off terrific door prizes, including airfare, accommodations and tickets to Disneyland, plus many more prizes.

Tickets are $10 per person donation with all net proceeds to benefit Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula. Group tables of 12 can be ordered in advance, as well as party trays. Although tickets may be available at the door, seating is limited, so call to reserve tickets or send your check for faster reservations to Meals on Wheels; 700 Jewell Avenue; Pacific Grove, 93950; or call 375-4454.

MONTEREY PENINSULA CHAMBER/VCB ANNUAL DINNER SET FOR JAN. 24

Strolling magicians, a master illusionist and a touch of magic in the air. The Monterey Peninsula Chamber and Visitors & Convention Bureau's 1992 Annual Dinner will offer all this and more Friday, Jan. 24th. The event will take place at the Inn at Spanish Bay with a champagne reception at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m. This year's theme will be, "Do You Believe In Magic?" Highlighting the evening will be Master Illusionist, Christopher Chacon. Chacon was once an assistant to the well-known magician, David Copperfield. Besides the magic, dinner and live music the night will offer, the Annual Dinner's main purpose is to welcome the 1992 President and Board of Directors and honor the retiring president and board members. Outgoing president, Jack Holt, will hand over the Chamber leadership to Mark Verbonich. Holt is with Shirlee Publications in Carmel. Incoming President, Mark Verbonich, will be inaugurated as the 1992 Chamber/VCB President during the evening's ceremonies. Verbonich is Vice President of Community Affairs for Pebble Beach Co.

The dinner will also dish up a few other surprises in the way of the Outstanding Citizen of the Year and Robert C. Littlefield Award recipient. The Littlefield award is presented to a Chamber member based on outstanding contribution of time and talent to the Chamber/VCB. The Outstanding Citizen honor goes to a member of the community who exemplifies civic spirit, service and leadership. Traditionally, these two awards are kept secret until the names are announced at the dinner. For information, contact the Chamber/VCB Membership Services Department at 648-5359.

Monterey Peninsula College

MPC has built its reputation as a quality educational institution on the basis of its outstanding faculty. MPC transfer students are as successful, on the average, as those who enroll directly to four-year institutions for their first two years of college. At MPC, students find small classes taught by instructors who are teaching professionals, not teaching assistants or researchers. MPC recognizes the importance of a close relationship among instructors, students, and support staff.

Joni Bishop - completed math, basic chemistry and biology courses at MPC before transferring to UC Santa Cruz; she is now enrolled in the veterinarian program at UC Davis.

"I believe it is easier for the older student returning to college to begin at MPC where nurturing is available and classes are smaller. The instructors at MPC understand that returning students need extra encouragement.

The quality and caliber of instructors at MPC is equal to, or better, than that found at four-year institutions.

For younger students, attending MPC provides the opportunity to discover their potential while, at the same time, they save a tremendous amount of money.

A lot of people don't realize that MPC — and the quality education the college provides — is right in their own backyard."

Mary Stevens Wiley

Mary Wiley, longtime resident of Carmel, died on Friday, Dec. 13, peacefully at her Canterbury Woods residence. She was 75.

Born in Bryn Mawr, Pa. on March 9, 1916, Wiley received her B.S. degree from the University of North Carolina and her M.A. and Ed.D. degrees from New York University. She taught in the Kinston public schools in North Carolina, Friends Select School in Philadelphia, Cedar Crest College and Westchester State College in Pa. and San Jose State College for 25 years. Her primary responsibility at San Jose State was to develop a recreation curriculum in which men and women students could be prepared to work with all age groups in a variety of institutions.

During WW II, She worked with the USO Overseas Division in Brazil as Mobile Unit Director responsible for producing, directing and transporting shows for service personnel in Bahia and Recife. She also earned a Brazilian pilot's license in her spare time.

In 1972, after her retirement from teaching, she was called to Washington, D.C. to receive the National Society of Park and Recreation Educators' Award for Dedicated Leadership. This was only one of many prestigious awards she received in the course of her recreation and administrative career.

Always interested in all kinds of people and in new endeavors, Wiley earned a Real Estate Sales License in 1971 and later a Real Estate Broker's License. She was associated with the Morrow Realty in San Jose.

She moved to Carmel in 1977 and in 1986 she took up residence at Canterbury Woods in Pacific Grove.

LOCAL RESIDENT CHEERS ON BILLS

The fact the Buffalo Bills, for the second straight year, are representing the American Football Conference in the Super Bowl brings great joy to Alan Perlmutter, Big Sur resident and owner of the River Inn Resort in Big Sur.

Perlmutter, who lived in Buffalo for 17 years and was a Bills' season ticket holder for 10 of those years and didn't miss a home game, is, of course, pulling for his hometown team. To suitably celebrate the occasion, Perlmutter and the River Inn will be hosting a special party this Sunday.

The day-long party begins at 11:30 a.m. when Jake Stock & the Abalone Stompers begin their weekly gig at the inn's outdoor deck. They will play until 3 p.m., at which time the party moves inside in time for the kickoff. The festivities will include authentic Buffalo Chicken Wings using the original recipe from Frank & Teresa's Anchor Bar in Buffalo as well as "Beef on Wick," another Buffalo taste treat. In addition ever TD pass thrown by Bills' quarterback Jim Kelly will result in free draft beer for all party attendees.

chairman of the United Way in Chicago in 1958 and his corporate directorships included the Maryland Cup Corporation of Baltimore and the Tuthill Pump Co. of Chicago. He was a member of the Reserve City Bankers Association, Robert Morris Associates and the Newcomen Society.

Naber was a 50-year member of Continental Illinois American Legion Post 383 and a 50-year member of the Hanna Lodge 61 F&AM in Wabash, Ind.

After his retirement, he moved to Carmel Valley, becoming active in civic and church affairs. He served as an elder of Carmel Presbyterian Church and was a past president and director of the Del Mesa Carmel Association. He was a past vice president and director of the Carmel Foundation and in 1972 served as a member of the Monterey County Grand Jury. Mr. Naber was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

Survivors include two sons, Fred Naber of Menlo Park and Dr. Robert Naber of Salinas; five grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

His wife of 64 years, Marion, died in 1989.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements, and the burial was held at El Carmelo Cemetery. The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Carmel Foundation or to the donor's favorite charity.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

*Fear is a low motive,
but it is effective*

Once on the bridge of a Norwegian freighter bound for Manila, the Captain observed that "there are no atheists in foxholes." I'm sure that is true; but there are none on ships at sea either. He then quoted from the 107 Psalm: "They that go down to the sea in ships that do business in great waters. These see the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep." (The modern translators of the Bible have really worked over this psalm to its detriment as they have done to the beloved and poetic 23 The Lord Is My Shepherd.)

In life, we encounter frequent storms, squalls, and rough seas as we sail from launching to beaching. We suffer from physical, mental and spiritual turmoil. We are subjected to anxiety, fear, depression and confusion. Often, we take out our frustrations on our families and friends.

Like the captain in a storm who waits too long to call for help because he fears that he might lose his ship or its cargo to salvage, we show our false pride and misplaced independence; however, a call for help shows that we believe that the Lord is watching and that He has the power to rescue us.

There is a price to pay; we have to give up our selfishness and tell him we will keep His laws. How huge do the waves have to be, how fierce the winds, how near the rocks before we are willing to cry out "Lord, help us, we perish."

A philosopher once said that fear is the lowest of all motives but no one can deny that is the most effective. Amen

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

In 1979, 50 seniors in Pinellas County, Florida, turned out for a half-day of athletic competition. It not only became an annual event but has expanded into a nine-day festival for seniors called Good Life Celebration. The latest festival attracted 30,000 people. More than 2,500 participated in sports, including 26 softball teams. About 65 percent of the athletes were over age 65. Along with 15 types of sports competition, the festival features live-theater performances, exhibits, recreational activities, a wellness fair and social events.

Longtime news correspondent and TV commentator Eric Sevareid shared some of his thoughts about aging in a speech to a national convention of senior citizens: "We are at 85 the same person we were at 25. We possess the same personality. We all privately think of ourselves as about 15 years younger than our chronological age. So I am 62 — I think."

Remember when? 1933 — Katherine Hepburn won an Oscar as best actress for her role in "Morning Glory."

★ Star ★ Journeys

By Carol Hemingway

Where is your Venus?

THERE ARE no bad relationships, only people who don't know themselves," says the introduction to my second book manuscript, Astrological Star Mates.

Often clients ask me, "What sign is compatible with mine?" That depends on whether we are talking about your Sun sign or where Venus is placed in your chart, by sign — yours and his.

Venus in Taurus can be very possessive (Warren Beatty, Hitler and Spencer Tracy are a few examples) and Venus in Scorpio (its opposite sign) can be very controlling. They don't fall in love, they take hostages. John Paul Getty had Venus in Scorpio, so does Bruce Springsteen and Marla Maples. Venus in Leo wants to be adored, made love to, undressed in designer labels (Truman Capote had Venus in Leo), while Venus in Aquarius just wants to be friends, nothing heavy — intimacy scares them to death! John Steinbeck had Venus in Aquarius, so does Ivana Trump. Venus in these fixed signs are not going to change, unless they choose to. Yes, what you see is definitely what you get.

Then, there's Venus in Cancer, the highest form of love you can have — they love you unconditionally, without expectations. I mean they will take you, warts and all. They need emotional security more than financial security

(which is Venus in Taurus). My father, Ernest Hemingway, had Venus in Cancer; so does Donald Trump and your columnist Carol Hemingway . . . and Clint Eastwood!

Venus in Pisces always seem to attract partners that look like they just walked out of a toxic waste dump, when what they need is a spiritual relationship. Some still think of spirit as, "I'll have another double scotch, bartender." I might add here that Hugh Hefner (Playboy magazine) has Venus in Pisces. Pisces also rules pictures and illusions. Casanova had Venus in Pisces.

Venus in Aries, be it male or female, take the initiative in romance and they tend to be aggressive in expressing emotions. The women often chase the men and, hey gals, since 1992 is a leap year, you can propose marriage to your partner this year. They are competitive and are passionate in love and romance, that's because Mars, their ruler and masculine, gives vital life force energy to the affections. Katharine Hepburn has Venus in Aries; so does Elizabeth Taylor and so did Tennessee Williams.

Venus in Gemini must have two lovers at a time because they like variety and they are curious about people. Settling down is not easy for them — "My God, did you say you wanted a commitment?" They are full of wit, talk while making love, and like a brilliant mind, but give them lots of freedom as they don't pull well in double harness. Careful if they're writers, or you may end up in one of their novels! William Randolph Hurst, Amelia Earhart and Cher have Venus in Gemini.

Venus in Virgo likes doctors, nurses, and all those in the medical and new age fields — especially healers. They fall in love with their therapists. They can't help it as they love to analyze their love lives and need to be careful of being overly critical of those they love which cuts off spontaneity in a relationship. They like neat and tidy sex and believe it or not, more Venus in Virgo people are unmarried than any of the other signs. John D. Rockefeller had Venus in Virgo; so does Julia Child and so did John Lennon.

Venus in Libra must be married, usually twice (for comparison). These people are usually drop-dead gorgeous or a hunk, and someone is always proposing to them. They like harmony and bonding. Romantic, affectionate — give them candlelight and roses for the rest of their lives. Beauty to them is more important than money. Richard Gere has Venus in Libra, so did Princess Grace of Monaco, Prince Charles and F. Scott Fitzgerald . . . and Picasso.

Venus in Capricorn can and usually are snobs. Social climbing is important to them, a known name, and the wealthier, the better. They get an orgasm peeking at a restaurant bill, especially when they're not paying it. Arranged marriages with the proper mate appeals to them. Robert Kennedy, Beethoven and General George Patton all had Venus in Capricorn.

Venus in Sagittarius are our New Age lovers. Very outspoken, open, and blunt about their feelings, you don't want to hear it, though. Their soul is here on an "evolutionary experience." They like to marry within their own religious structure, yet are not afraid of getting involved in unusual relationships. I once had a client with Venus in Sagittarius in New Jersey. Her first kiss was from a monk and she tried to seduce a Catholic priest (she did not succeed, he probably had Venus in Capricorn). Mark Twain, Alan Alda and Olympics decathlon champion Bob Mathias have Venus in Sagittarius.

EJC: Carmel, female, born May 24, 1946. I'm looking forward to 1992 being a very good year — career, finance and romance, the big three. How does it look to you?

C.H.: Yes, you certainly are a Gemini. What happened in 1991? That was your best 30-year Sun cycle, with a Sun-Moon opposition in adaptable signs; meaning you cannot afford a junk food diet. Your Venus is on the cusp of Gemini and Cancer...

Careful of money investments March 19 through March 22. Don't commit verbally and postpone signing contracts. Saturn will be opposing your Pluto, Jan. 20 through Feb. 13. Get rid of the non-essentials in your life. Have a garage sale or two during those dates.

Saturn comes back to haunt your Mars in Leo in its first cycle, March 12 through April 14, triggered by Mars in Aquarius, March 7 through 10. What is making you angry? How do you deal with your anger? This is the time to release it, perhaps through some sort of therapy or self-help techniques. Suggest you read Saturn, a new look at an old development by Liz Greene (available at Pilgrim's Way Book store, on Dolores; see Michael or call 624-4955). Saturn in aspect to Mars (pages 116-120 are the ones to read).

See you all next week! Call me with your questions at 624-2881.

Mariè-Therese Taylor to sing in benefit cabaret for French Alliance

THE FRENCH Alliance of the Monterey Peninsula will host a Benefit Cabaret Performance by Marie-Therese Taylor at the Monterey Conference Center Serra Ballroom on Friday, Jan. 24, at 8 p.m.

The featured chanteuse is well-known in the peninsula through previous local concerts and also community activities. In her one-woman show, in a varied piano and song repertoire, Taylor will bring to life the development of French Cabaret, its music and style, from its origins a century ago at Le Chat Noir in Montmartre, to present times.

The artist, a distinguished graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Liege, her hometown in Belgium, started her singing career at 17, when she was discovered by "the Glen Miller of Belgium," Joseph Thies, and hired to perform at the Escalade Bleue cabaret ("Blue Port of Call") in Liege.

At the end of World War II, she came to the U.S. where she has been a choir director, music teacher and performer. A long-time resident of the Monterey Peninsula, she is a former president of the Monterey Symphony Guild, and currently, with her husband, Al Taylor, owns and manages "Taylor Parties" in Pacific Grove.

This performance is a benefit for the Scholarship Fund of the French Alliance of the Monterey Peninsula, a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting interest in the French language and culture, and encouraging the study of French locally by awarding prizes and scholarships annually to students in local schools, through French contests at the local and national levels, in conjunction with the Federation of French Alliances in the United States.

Tickets are $15 per person. For information, call Danielle C. Cooper, 373-1178.

Armenia native wants to share his visions of a kinder, gentler world

By JOHN DETRO

THE TALENTED young painter's comments about social change and deeper values could not be more timely.

When he arrived in these parts a year ago, his native ground — Armenia — was a firm part of the Soviet Union. Today, of course, mapmakers scramble to unscramble that vast area's altered states.

"I came back just 15 days ago after spending three months with my people," 30-year-old Zahre Papian said, at his Pacific Grove home. "It has happened so quickly. I do not know what to call that (former geopolitical union). My country has been recognized as independent. The situation is better there than in Russia, where people don't have the simplest things to eat."

And: "I would like my work to be the opposite of the world situation — my celebrations of music, theater, flowers. In hard times, maybe people will think about art and be more quiet. I'm no revolutionary who wants to change everything. I simply want to share with people that, when the world seems hard, there are these other things and ideas as well—"

Papian will get his local showcase on Jan. 24, when Pacific Grove Art Center opens his first solo exhibit in this country. Spanning a full decade, the vibrant oils and other works will be at PGAC through Feb. 21. Opening night will feature a public reception for the artist from six till eight o'clock.

Zahre was born in Yerevan (Armenia's capital) and as a boy began studying with his father, Anatoly, a painter of considerable repute. Within two years of graduation from Yerevan Art Institute, Zahre had work being shown in Moscow's famed Manye Gallery and many other choice sites. Westerners were drawn to his vision — young newswoman Esther Schrader among them.

"We met in Armenia," Papian explained. "She was a freelance journalist for (major North American papers). Esther and I were married in the United States (December 1990) and today she's Monterey Peninsula bureau chief (with the San Jose daily). I like this very beautiful area. It reminds me of my country, which is very mountainous too. I like to go hiking with my wife. My work connects with the landscape."

LOCAL EXHIBIT—Young Armenian painter Zahre Papian will have his first solo show in this country at the Pacific Grove Art Center. It will open with a public reception Jan. 24 and run through Feb. 21. These days, Papian calls PG his hometown.

He was influenced as well — and deeply — by the music with which his concert pianist mother and conductor brother filled their home. "Having developed as an artist in the bleak Soviet Union of the 1970s and early 1980s," his background material declared, "Papian sees his art as an articulation of the vivid inner life that gives his people the strength to survive...In a series of paintings dealing with marionette theater, Papian explored the role-playing and manipulation endemic to human society — and the tragedy of innocents caught in unwanted revolutions...Papian's deep colors and often somber and pensive portraits attest to the burdens of life in a society changing so fast...that beauty is the only thing left to cling to."

And the well-spoken man stressed: "I don't mean that people should think about beauty in the abstract. Beauty is a real alternative whenever any nation faces hard times."

Blues fans rejoice

BLUES FANS have a reason to rejoice these days, what with the offerings at Doc Ricketts' Lab in the first few months of 1992.

Already the club has showcased the talents of the Forbidden Pigs and Joe Louis Walker & the Boss Talkers this month alone. And the upcoming lineup of acts in the next two months will make any blues fan's head spin (see further down the column for the actual lineup).

Joe Louis Walker played to a sparse, if vocal, crowd Monday night, but Walker is the type of performer who'll give it his all whether there are 2, 20 or 2,000 people in the audience. With the five-piece, horn-driven Boss Talkers roaring behind him, Walker more than lived up to the perhaps unfortunate tag "the next Robert Cray." Walker, in fact, may have a little more juice and grit than his more famous contemporary. While Cray is all style and smoothness, Walker is gritty soul and sass. Even though his vocals don't measure up to Cray's silky sophistication, his guitar playing has a more biting, commanding edge than Cray's. Like Cray, however, Walker specializes in a kind of blues/soul hybrid that is very appealing. The year is still young, but local clubgoers may have to file Walker's show as one of the best of year come December.

Vying for that title will be Doc's next Blue Monday offering, the superb Texas blues and R&B of Anson Funderburgh and the Rockets featuring Sam Myers. Funderburgh may be one of the best young guitar slingers to come out of Texas, and that's no mean feat coming from a state that has produced Albert Collins, Stevie Ray Vaughn and Johnny Winter (among others). Funderburgh, in fact, may be likened to another young Texas guitar whiz, Stevie's older brother Jimmy Vaughn, former member of the Fabulous Thunderbirds now leading his own band.

Like the older Vaughn, Funderburgh features a clean, spare attack on his trademark Stratocaster; nary a note is wasted or overdone. Aspiring blues guitar players should take note, so to speak, of his understated style and finesse, it speaks volumes.

Sam Myers is the perfect counterpoint to Funderburgh's fluidity, offering a gruff vocal style and roof-raising harmonica playing to the mix. Myers cut his blues teeth with the legendary Elmore James, even scoring on a '57 Ace Records hit, My Love is Here to Stay, which the Rockets rerecorded in their '87 release, naming it after Myers' '57 hit. Funderburgh and the Rockets' third recording, Rack 'Em Up (on Blacktop) is a gem, filled to the brim with their unique brand of Texas blues and soul.

Funderburgh and the boys blow into town for a 9 p.m. kickoff show (two rockin' sets), Monday, Jan. 27, at Doc's, of course.

UPCOMING EVENTS with a musical bent on the Monterey Peninsula and outlying areas:

• Forget what you read here last week about dates for acts coming to Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row, here's the real lowdown (the booker tells me that these are confirmed dates... subject to change at a minute's notice, of course). This is a powerhouse schedule, comparable to clubs such as Slim's in San Francisco and The Catalyst in Santa Cruz — and you don't have to drive as far or pay as much to hear the same groups playing there. Now I call that a real bargain in these recessionary times.

Here's the lineup, save up your dimes and nickels, 'cause it'll be worth it: Pat Travers, Jan. 30; blues great Charles Brown and Chris Cain Band, Feb. 3; Spirit (yes, that same Spirit from the '60s, with most of the original members intact), in a "Rock Against Recession" show for $5.99 at the door, Feb. 4; Randy Hansen and Strange Days, the former is a Jimi Hendrix imitator and the latter a Doors revivalist band. (Hansen was reported to have, get this, Hendrix' original bass player Noel Redding playing in the band, according to Rolling Stone magazine. Could be quite a show), that's Feb. 6; Bobby Kimball, formerly of studio rock band Toto, Feb. 13; Roomful of Blues, Feb. 17 (a show not to be missed); Royal Crown Review (dubbed the "Kings of Gangster Bop"), Feb. 18; harmonica ace James Harman fronts the James Harman Band (how clever), Feb. 24; Robben Ford returns March 2; Mardi Gras with The Sundogs is set for March 3; rockers Molly Hatchett blow into town March 4 and Johnny "Clyde" Copeland kicks into gear March 16. Slated for April are Debbie Davies, Marcia Ball and John Mayall. Blues fans rejoice because redemption is at hand.

As for the days in between, those will be capably filled with local talent, case in point: Nervus Rex on Jan. 23; Rock & Roll Rodeo Jan. 24-25; Lazy Hurricanes on Super Bowl Sunday, Jan. 26; and Terry Hanck and the Soulrockers Jan. 28-29.

Hanck, by the way, is recovering from a hernia operation, but should be in good shape by the Jan. 28 gig with his new band, which includes Gary Silva from the Elvin Bishop Band on drums and a new guitar player. Seems Terry keeps losing his players to guys such as Robert Cray. Tells you something about Terry's formidable "proving grounds."

Info on all shows can be had by calling 649-4241.

• Jonah and the Whale Watchers continue to play Shanty Malone's every Friday nights and occasional Wednesdays at Monterey Brewing Company. If you like roots raga-reggae, these are the places to be every Wednesday and Friday night. Call 375-3634 for info.

• Portofino Cafe in PG will feature a folk weekend with singer-songwriter Lee Gretchfield performing at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 24 ($6 cover), and Virginia-based singer Madeline MacNeil coming in at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 25 ($7). Also, on Tuesday, Jan. 28, Hamish Moore will hold forth on the Scottish pipes at an 8 p.m. show $8 at the door.

For reservation or further information about any of the above concerts at Portofino, call 373-7379.

• Upcoming shows at The Catalyst in Santa Cruz include: Doors Hotel, the Magpies and Mojave Green (Jan. 23); Jack Mack & the Heart Attack with Nick Clemmons Band (Jan. 24); Chris Cain Band (Jan. 25); Worlds Collide (Jan. 30); NRBQ (Jan. 31); Square Roots (Feb. 1); The Sundogs (on Dollar Night, Feb. 6); the return of The Beat Farmers (Feb. 7); Randy Hansen (Feb. 8); The David Bromberg Big Band (Feb. 10); Cowboy Junkies (sitdown show, Feb. 12); Y&T reunion show (Feb. 14, Valentine's Day, perfect); and Pele Juju (Feb. 15).

• The Midas & The Bridge/ Jonah and the Whale Watchers reggae show at The Club last Thursday was so successful (the place was not only jammin', but it was jam-packed), that The Club will be holding regular Thursday night reggae shows featuring none other than Jonah and de boys themselves, who probably are as responsible as anyone for this recent resurgence of reggae in this area.

The Ace Man Cometh

NEWSBREAK: Vicki Weeks of Shanty Malone's says vocalist Maria Muldaur will play that Carmel Valley venue on the first evening in February. The Saturday programming — shows at 8 and 10 p.m. It's $13 advance and $15 at the door. Advance ducats may be obtained right there (or call 626-0604 for other outlets).

LOCAL JAZZ pianist Ace Hill's fans will get their long-standing wish next month. The Ace Man says he'll release his first album as a leader within the next 10-15 days (CD and cassette).

The package — Look Out — includes 14 tunes. A half dozen Hill originals. Tasty standards by such giants as Johnny Richards and Sonny Stitt collaborating, Benny Golson, Johnny Mandel, Horace Silver, Andre Previn, Rodgers/Hart, Neal Hefti, Milt Jackson. An advance tape shows the commitment and non-stop energy which Ace has shared with listeners throughout three decades as a pro player.

Recording chores were split between Monterey and Fantasy Studios in Berkeley — so Hill works with two different bassists (Bryan McConnell and San Francisco's Ruth Davies) and drummers (Bill Jackson and Bob Blankenship). Producing with the leader were writer Nadine Raymond Lewis and Arthur Simon. Jess Knubis handled art direction. Liner notes by Johnny Adams of KRML Radio.

As usual, Ace seems right at home with the blues groove. Ballad treatments evidence much forethought, especially I Remember Clifford (written by Golson for late trumpet genius Clifford Brown).

"This (album) could be called a tribute to Monterey Peninsula jazz buffs in particular and my jazz ancestors in general," Ace said over lunch at Toots Lagoon. "I didn't want my concept and style to just fade away; it's history too." (That viewpoint emerged naturally. He teaches various history courses at Hartnell College and Soledad Prison.)

And: "The concept involves folk music, which doesn't depend upon ethnicity or jazz alone. Folk music tells a story. Then individuals can furnish their own interpretations. I was honoring those who told me important things in person — Billie Holiday, Duke Ellington, the great bluesman Joe Liggins. When I was a lad, Duke gave me a 'mystery chord' by which I could judge my technical progress. I finally found that chord while at rehearsal for this very recording session."

What about Lady Day? "I grew up near Harlem's Apollo Theater and was sneaking in one day. She exited and told me I couldn't hang out there unless I registered for public school. So I did — and ran to show her the papers."

Hill said jazz broadcasters hereabouts would get copies of the album. Once he establishes his distribution system, store names will appear in this space.

NOT SO long before he passed away, Stan Getz played a stunningly beautiful Sunday afternoon set at Monterey Jazz Festival. Afterwards, I asked Stan how he'd rank various pianists on the scene today. "Tommy Flanagan, Hank Jones, Kenny Barron," he replied at once. "They're the best. The very best."

The comment points up what jazz booker Richard Armbrust has done at and for Hidden Valley Music Seminars. Tommy will appear Jan. 31 as part of the Fridays at Eight Series. Tickets carry the usual numbers — $12.50 per — and will be available from the box office at 7:30 that evening. Flanagan's a global treasure and should not be missed.

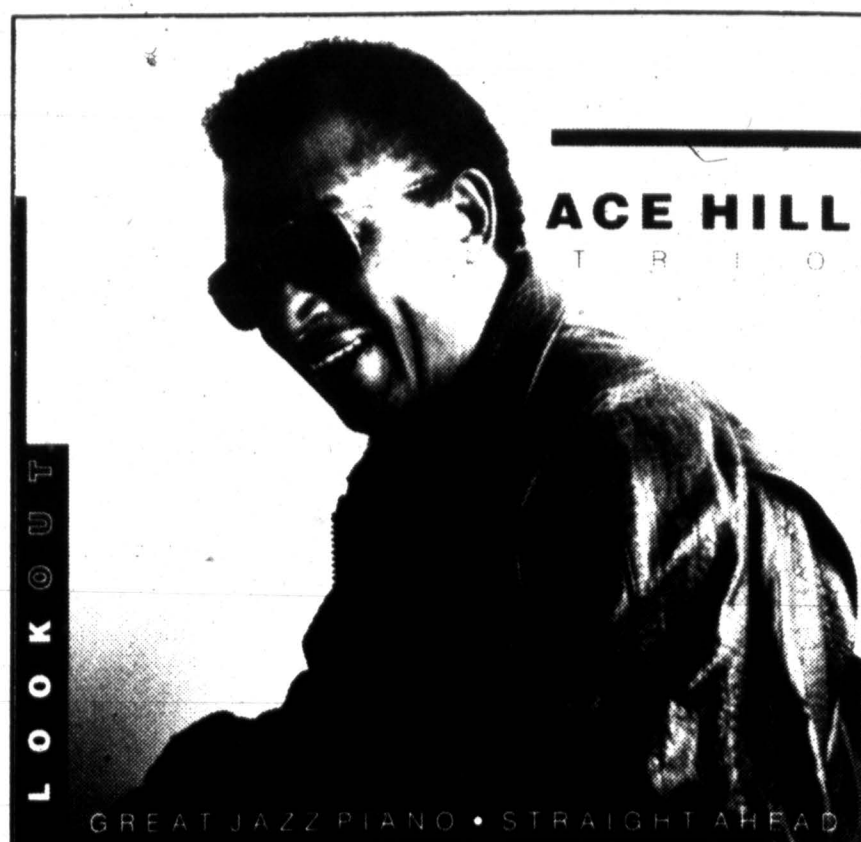

This Friday evening (1/24), Hidden Valley presents the Latin quintet fronted by guitarist Steve Erquiaga. Steve has worked with steel drum star Andy Narell and will bring along hot saxist Bob Sheppard for the local sets.

Snacks and non-alcoholic beverages will be available. Those who enjoy wine were invited to bring their own. All proceeds benefit Hidden Valley youth programs.

THE SUNDAY Afternoon Jazz Series at Doc Ricketts' Lab will take some time off (1/26) due to Super Bowl Madness. Then: guitarist Bruce Forman (2/2), justifiably famed tenor saxist Red Holloway (2/9), vocalist Kitty Margolis (2/16), pianist Kevin Gibbs (2/23). Hosted by reedman John Cortes, these parties run from two till six o'clock. Cover is $3 per.

Vocalist Lee Durley combined style and substance to give the goodly crowd a warm, upbeat, completely satisfying show (1/19). Blues, bossa nova things, romantic standards — he can do them all with witty grace.

Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz offers a knockout band on Monday night (1/27). — Elvin Jones Jazz Machine with saxists Sonny Fortune and Ravi Coltrane (John's son). Shows at 7:30 and 9:30. Just $13.50 advance (via Ticketmaster) or $15 per at the door.

NEW ONE—Here's the album cover for local jazz pianist Ace Hill's first package as leader. Tenita Productions of Carmel issues the session in CD and cassette. (See column for full details.)

The last time Elvin's crew played that space, young Coltrane impressed the audience with his facility and dedication (Ravi rehearsed in the dressing room between sets). Sonny's choruses always bring forth strength and great beauty:

Future file: Joe Pass plus Jessica Williams Trio (2/3), Mingus Dynasty with Jack Walrath and Ray Drummond (2/10), Peter Apfelbaum and the Hieroglyphics Ensemble (2/17), Roy Hargrove Quintet (2/24), Poncho Sanchez Band (3/9), Harper Brothers (3/16), Jimmy Heath Quartet (3/30).

The Dunes Dinner Jazz Series at Spanish Bay Inn spotlights two jazz/blues performers who use first names only — Tom and Valerie. On Thursday evening (1/30) there will be shows at 6:30 and 10. Cover charge waived with your meal; reservations recommended — 647-7423.

CABRILLO MUSIC Festival has hired a jazz-loving woman to take the conductor's baton and tiller in August. She's Marin Alsop, music director for Long Island Philharmonic and Eugene (Oregon) Symphony.

Alsop, 35, also conducts Concordia. This New York orchestra, which she founded in 1984, plays jazz as well as contemporary and European classical music. She records (on jazz violin) with the 14-piece aggregation called String Fever.

She'll take over for Dennis Russell Davies, who'll be

Music to relish

CLARK SUTTLE and the Monterey County Symphony provided a capacity audience with a stimulating afternoon of music Sunday in Carmel's Sunset Center Theater. It was a concert replete with contrasts as it surveyed a bright and varicolored musical spectrum. There weren't noticeable yawns and hardly a nodding head to be seen.

Maestro Suttle has made strenuous efforts to provide programs which interest and give satisfaction to his growing audiences and while this one did evoke some strong reactions there from, it certainly was piquant. There was little to disagree with in the choice of an opener.

Adam Gordon, principal trumpet of the orchestra was the soloist in the Hummel "Trumpet Concerto in E Major," a melodious work by a composer who studied piano with Mozart; composition with Haydn, Clementi, Salieri and succeeded Haydn as Kapellmeister at the court of the Esterhazys. All of these composers are generously represented in the concerto which was entertaining to listen to, especially when performed with such assurance.

Gordon's playing was smooth, cool and adept. He was particularly fine in the many graceful, song-like passages of the Andante which brought the middle range of the instrument into focus. A jolly dance tune with a light, merry and sparkling trumpet theme was surprisingly delicately and tastefully expounded and the technical details were all in excellent shape. Gordon's breath control and phrasing were exemplary.

This delightful Viennese bonbon was followed by an exact antithesis, a completely contemporary work premiered in Europe in 1990 by Maestro Suttle Joel Chadabe's 'Many Mornings, Many Moods' employs a pre-programmed Macintosh computer, a synthesizer, a percussion soloist and a greatly augmented Monterey County Symphony.

The sight of the Sunset stage packed full of musicians, instruments and percussion soloist Jan Williams surrounded by a vibraphone, a marimba and various woodblocks and even a group of other percussion paraphernalia in the in the back row of the orchestra, made for an audience daunting spectacle. The composer and his computer keyboard were hidden behind the cellos.

The 18-minute work began with fascinating vibraphone improvisations of a filmy, almost stream-of-consciousness variety. It was easy enough to relax and listen to as it flowed by at some length and then one began to wonder why that huge orchestra was present. Eventually, a melange of instruments began to participate, gaining in importance, finally building to a rhythmic, highly syncopated and jazzy climax. Yet, after all the build up of expectations and being made aware of all the large resources mustered for this grandiose endeavor, one was left with the sense that percussionist Williams and electronic manipulator Chadabe could have eliminated the Monterey contingent's contributions and gone at it as a duo, which, I think, would have removed a good bit of audience frustration at the sterility of the end product.

Maestro Suttle closed the program with a rousing, enlivening and well paced performance of "The Planets" by the English composer Gustav Holst. The results were brilliant, once again demonstrating the mature, highly skilled quality of the orchestra, consistent with their work this season.

Here that huge orchestra was a marvel to listen to. The string sound was lush, yet secure. There were fine solo passages from concertmaster Philip Levy and principal cellist Peter Gelfand. The wind section was cohesive and achieved some of its finest tonal blending. The brasses were majestically solid and resonant and all those percussionists were colorful and precise.

The seven sections of the work ranged from the massive fortes and elemental solidity of "Mars" through the cool, peaceful mood of "Venus", the light flitterings of "Mercury", the English bluntness of "Jupiter", The funereal musings of "Saturn", the humorous flavor of "Uranus" and finally the hazy trailing mists of "Neptune."

This time the net effect more than justified the efforts it took to bring Holst's vast musical canvasses to life. One doesn't hear it live very often, which may be just as well, but when one does hear it in such a zestful rendition, it is truly music to relish and remember.

Golfer-friendly tome

ANYONE WHO has read anything by local writer Ray March knows that he's a completely professional wordman. Ray likely could turn flower farming or trade balance stats into absorbing typescripts.

It so happens — lucky for the sport's adherents — that Ray March loves golf. He columnizes about the green links and served Pebble Beach as Sports and Publicity Director. Now comes a March title that must be called rather amazing because of its sheer range and cover-to-cover brightness.

The complete guide to California golf (see ad copy below), drew these words from United States Golf Association Prexy Grant Spaeth: "A superb book for those in search of wonderful golfing." My favorite public spaces are jazz clubs, small Italian and Mexican restaurants, gyms where boxers sharpen skills. Ray's vision has made golf course design and atmospheric variables of genuine interest to this former amateur pug from East Oakland — no small triumph.

Foghorn Press/San Francisco distributes a flat-out winner here. The guide's 1992-93 edition considers more than 700 spreads throughout this state — detailed course descriptions (ratings, yardage, layouts, so on) plus services offered as well as management names and numbers. Lists of Top 20 and Toughest 20 courses let golfers match their personal picks with the experts.

The extensive index and detailed maps make this book especially "golfer friendly." It has been designed to fit into a golf bag.

Courses are organized by type: public, semi-private, resort, private, military. At your fingertips are play and reservation policies, reciprocal status, the most difficult holes and doglegs and traps. Women golfers surely will appreciate the full info on women's yardage and ratings.

Via an intelligent foreword, Ray considers the general outlook for golf within the Golden State at present: "...there are far more golfers than there are golf courses...golf, with all its traditions, is too important a sport and business to let slide into an anarchy of quick-fix solutions." (More next time.)

THE NATIONAL Book Critics Circle preceded its latest batch of awards by nominating five books in five categories. Winners will be announced in March (3/18) at New York Historical Society. Nominees carried forth a distinctly regional flavor.

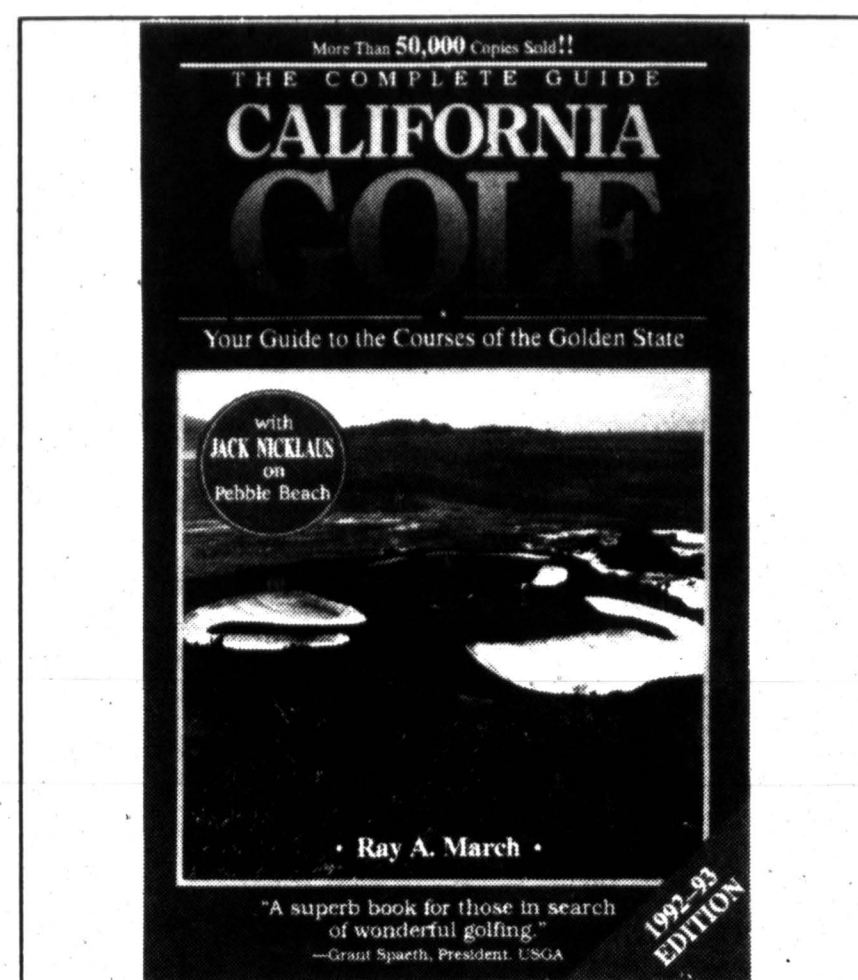

First of all, Santa Cruz poet Adrienne Rich was put up there for An Atlas of the Difficult World. Stanford professor Diane Middlebrook scored with her biography of the late poet Anne Sexton (controversial because Sexton's psychiatrist released file material to Middlebrook). In general nonfiction, San Francisco journalist Susdan Faludi was represented by Backlash: The Undeclared War Against American Women. (Faludi won a Pulitzer Prize last year for the way she covered leveraged buyouts.)

Also, Fresno poet Philip Levine was nominated for the same title which won the National Book Award last November: What Work Is.

By me, one poetry title that was nominated would deserve close examination any time: Diane Ackerman's Jaguar of Sweet Laughter.

If you wish the complete roster, get in touch through this journal and I'll send it in the mail.

ON SATURDAY afternoon at five o'clock (1/25), Thunderbird Bookshop of The Barnyard will present Rita Firestone Seger lecturing on Spirituality in the workplace. A wine and cheese reception precedes her remarks by an hour. Admission: $5 per.

The Carmel resident has just released a book — The Essence of Being a Woman Entrepreneur. It's based on her decades-long experience as a successful businesswoman. She'll sign copies Saturday.

Richard Tarnas will lecture at the same site on Monday evening (1/27) beginning at seven o'clock. He'll consider his much-praised book The Passion of the Western Mind. Therein, Tarnas tracks our cultural consciousness from its start to the 21st century's inception. It's $5 at the door.

Pilgrim's Way Bookstore in downtown Carmel slates another lecture next week (Wednesday evening 2/29). Dan Barthel and Rick Nunez, who have a Carmel crystals and gems store, will discuss "de-mystifying

There's more to gaining college admission than having straight A's

I was inspired to write this article to let other students know that they don't have to be victims in the college application process.

As I began my senior year with less than straight-A grades, I began to wonder which school was realistically right for me, and which people could help me find out.

The Career Center and Peter Lyon helped me tremendously. I hope this article can help you.

By SANDY GRIFFITH

If college-bound Jesus Cardenas had followed the advice of his friends and teachers, he would never have been accepted to Humboldt State University.

Cardenas, 17, is one of a handful of seniors who defied the conventional wisdom that says colleges are unwilling to accept seniors who lack high grades or test scores.

"A lot of colleges accept people for different reasons such as your choice of major, your interview, or your ethnic background," says Cardenas who plans to college on a journalism scholarship for minorities.

The trick to gaining attention is to increase your odds by applying to the right college.

"The basic thing you need to know is that there is a college for everyone," says Karen Baker, a CHS College Career Center advisor. "People shouldn't worry because they weren't a totally perfect person at age 15."

In truth, most California State Universities and the Universities of California admit 40 percent of freshmen under special circumstances according to Baker.

Cal Berkeley says that 40 percent of admissions are reviewed for extracurricular activities and personal circumstances that might justify special consideration.

The other 60 percent are judged by their academic index score (AIS) which is derived from their grades and test scores and the student's "significant commitment to work and community service."

There are a lot of students who have a high GPA and a low SAT score, showing that they exceeded what the tests said they could. There are also students who have the opposite, showing high potential and someone who hasn't worked hard.

"This type is called a borderline student," says Baker. "They should apply to a private school which looks at more than just our AIS."

Stanford University says that its second criterion for admissions is a "personal achievement outside the classroom in a range of pursuits, including academic activities, the creative and performing arts, community service and leadership, athletics and other extra-curricular areas."

If you have any questions on which type of school best suits your needs, contact the Career Center.

"We'll help you find the right college for you," says Baker.

Jury still out on condom giveaway

By PAUL MURPHY

The distribution of condoms on campus at CHS is still just an idea, despite the rapid spread of the deadly disease of AIDS and the increase of teenage pregnancy.

There are mixed opinions about this among the faculty, students, and parents at CHS.

"If you want condoms, go out and buy them yourself. If you're responsible enough to have sex, you should be responsible enough to go out and get them on your own," said CHS secretary Ann Berry.

On the other hand, some faculty members believe in giving away condoms at school.

"People are gonna have sex no matter what, so if you give them condoms, it might cause them to do it more wisely," said English Teacher Tom Clifford.

"I think it was a good idea. A lot of kids are sexually active. Instead of having to go into the store, you can just get them at school," said Coach Mike Woody.

CHS principal Marie Ishida, who would have a large say whether or not condoms would be distributed on campus, is undecided on the issue.

"I need to think about it," said Ishida.

"The whole possibility should be explored by the ASB, with the opinions of the parents and students considered."

That is just it — the opinions of students and parents must be taken into consideration. Like the faculty, the thoughts of the students and parents on the proposition differ.

"It would be awkward at first, but after a while it would be cool," said senior Tobin Leslie on the subject.

"I think it would just be a joke. People would be blowing them up all over campus. Nobody would take it seriously," said junior Mark Williams.

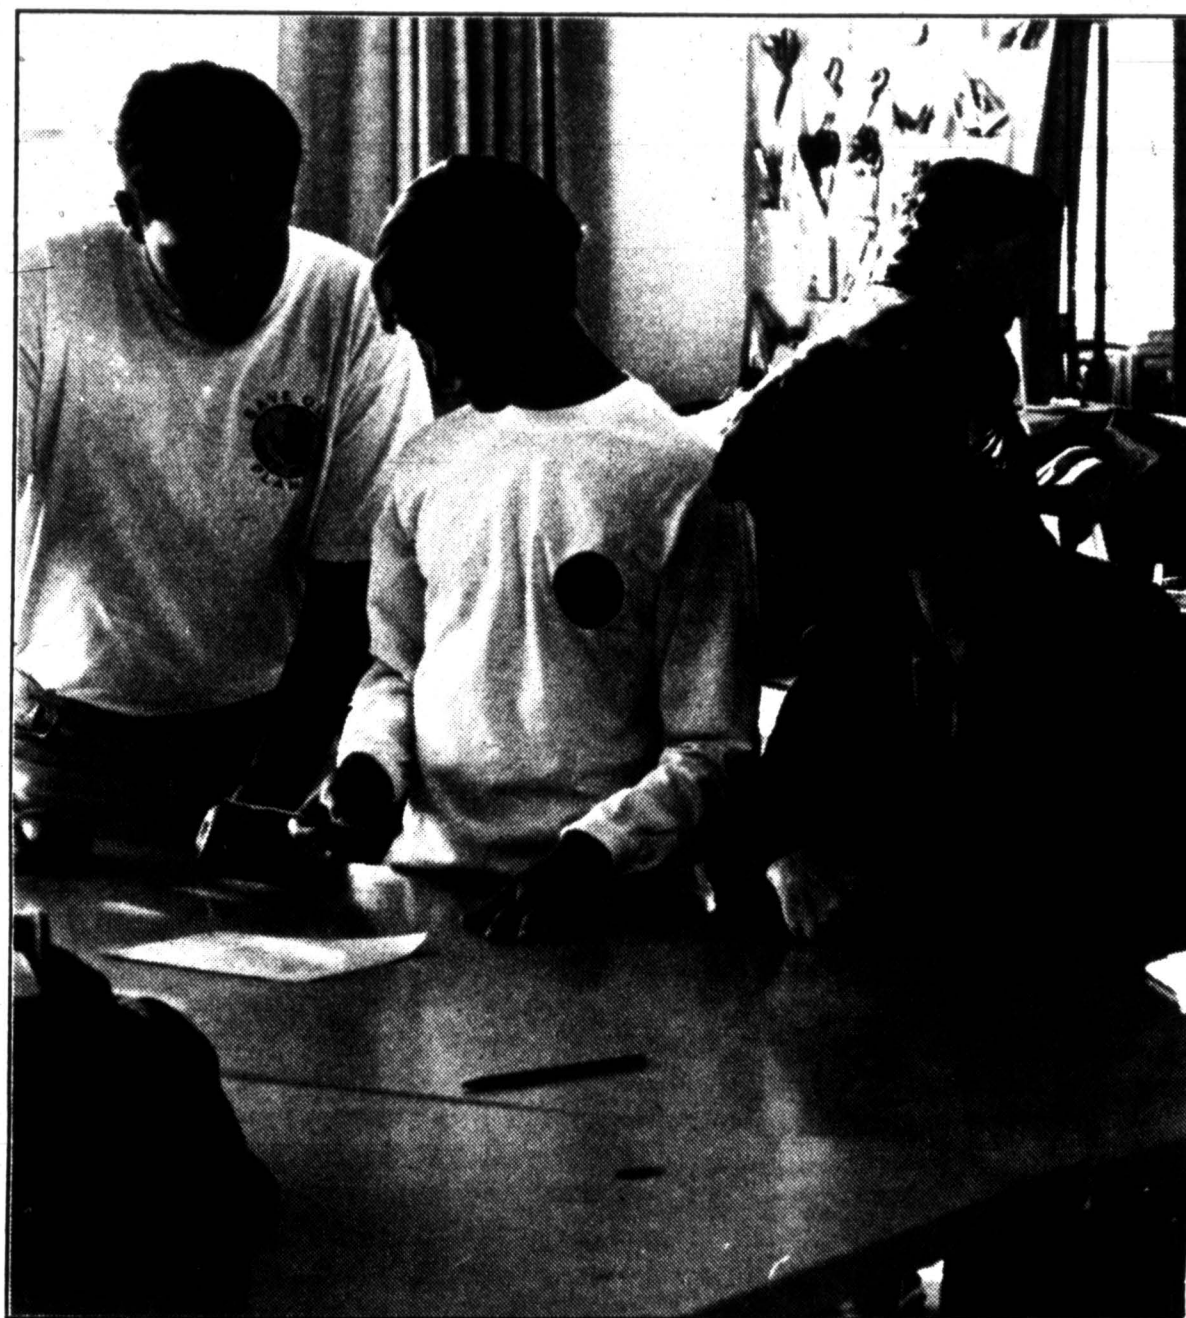

"Giving away condoms on campus would encourage sexual activity among the students," said an anonymous CHS parent.

Contrary to that statement, some parents are all for the distribution of condoms on campus.

The Santa Cruz High School newspaper, the "Trident," distributed condoms with their paper several weeks ago and have mostly positive comments about it.

"The students really liked it. The teachers were supportive, too. But, we received letters from parents having both opinions for and against it," said Dov Rothman, the co-editor.

The immediate future of this possibility at CHS is still up in the air.

Over-worked yearbook staff enters final days of production

By KELLI CAYLOR

The yearbook staff has been working hard for this year's publication. The class has had its ups and downs, but everyone is taking the difficulties in stride.

"Everything was going really well until one of the cameras malfunctioned and five rolls of film had to be reshoot," said Sue Williams, yearbook adviser. "But, that is the whole process of yearbooks."

The yearbook class takes place during seventh period, but it takes many more hours during the week and throughout the year to put it together.

"We started planning the theme of the yearbook during the summer," said Williams, adding that the subject is a well-kept secret. "It was tough to get everyone to decide on the same thing."

The cost of printing is very expensive and the lowest bid came from a printer in Utah. All the layouts are being sent to Utah, with deadlines coming up soon. The first deadline was in November, and the last deadline is in March. The printing takes about three months.

The yearbook is divided into sections: senior, underclassmen, staff, sports and ads.

Yearbook students filled out an application for the section in which they wanted to work.

The long hours have paid off.

"The work has given us a lot of satisfaction," said Williams.

"It is the best yearbook ever, in the three years I have been advisor. It is well written and good quality."

Yearbooks mean different things to different people — a place for happy times and sad, a book to look back on in the years ahead, or just another to gather dust.

Year's first CHS dance concert slated for Jan. 30 at Sunset Center

The CHS dancers will be performing their first concert of the year on Thursday, Jan. 30, at the Sunset Center.

Pacific Grove High School and Robert Louis Stevenson will also be performing as guest artists.

The CHS dancers have been very excited and have been working hard for the past few months to put on this show.

The theme of the dance show is "A Night On The Town." The dances being performed are various movements with a strong accent on jazz and hip-hop. The music also varies from rap and funk to progressive.

Donations are $3. The dance show will only be for one night, so come and see the CHS dancers show their stuff.

Students' skewed values called into question

By NATHAN CHOW

At this very moment, a crime is being committed in our cities. It could be a crime against the government, a crime against a fellow human, a crime against the environment, or a crime against the U. S. Constitution.

It doesn't really matter, because it isn't being committed here.

That is the attitude of the students of CHS, and this is a crime against humanity. Civil war in Yugoslavia. Who cares? Break-up of the Soviet Union. Who cares? Lopsidedness of Supreme Court. Who cares? Loss of civil rights. Who cares? Loss of freedom. . . .

The focus of attention, for CHS students, would seem to be on lengthy lunches and useless class elections. This might be appropriate for underclassmen who still have several years of "innocence." But it is shameful for upperclassmen who plan on being "pillars" in society.

"I care about sports"

"I care about my boyfriend"

"I care about my car"

These are all actual statements of CHS seniors. It is really ironic that most CHS seniors are too preoccupied with themselves to care about their world. What will be left when the reality of the world crashes in upon them? A hollow shell? No. They are already that.

"I just care about beer," said senior Jeremy Buck, "Oh yeah, and also the environment . . . uh, and chicks. Hey, I don't care, it's Carmel High."

The basic values of CHS, like other schools across the nation, are in serious jeopardy. The blame doesn't rest on any specific cause. The social climate of today's society encourages indifference and insensitivity.

For many people, to care might cause them to become socially ostracized or politically destroyed.

There is a significant lack of "causes" for young people to adopt these days. Most of the ones that do exist center around esoteric and spiritual causes that don't really entail much physical involvement.

"It appears that our choices are severely limited due to the deterioration of our moral values and the break-up of the family unit," observed one senior.

Although the "causes" in contemporary society are severely limited, the students of CHS should be credited for their ability to create causes, whether important or not.

The parking lot expansion initiative could be the most "important" cause that most CHS students will ever hitch themselves onto in their lives. It outshines the Peace Corps in its importance, obliterates the nuclear freeze movement in its dedication, and distances the Don Henley Save Walden Woods movement with its prestige.

It is a credit, however, to some students for their dedication to the environment. The SMART club contains some really excellent people who should be a credit to the rest of the students of CHS.

Members like Octavia Jolley venerate the environment from whence we came.

Even in this club, there are people that join it just for the yearbook photo. Only the top echelon of the club do the real work.

"Hey, I just joined it to have something on my application," said one junior.

CHS is not the most noble environment for people to adopt worthy causes, but it is still much better than other high schools. It seems that to care about other people's causes, one must first care about oneself.

The world is Olcese's oyster

By MELISSA INGLES

Nothing can stop Tillio Olcese from doing what he wants. This CHS senior relies on his own set of rules to determine what is going to happen.

Take, for example, the time he went skiing and decided to go off into a closed area. He soon found himself being chased by the ski patrol.

"All I was thinking was, am I good enough to outrun these guys? Once I kept going, I couldn't stop. I had to prove to myself I'm a good skier," says Olcese.

Not about to stop his fun, he kept going until he was practically run over. Lucky for Olcese, no legal charges were pressed. He just had to listen to a long lecture on obeying rules and safety on the slopes.

Aside from being a dare devil on the slopes, he also enjoys the outdoors and just hanging out with the boys. Olcese also has a fleet of cars, such as a Bronco and a '27-T hot rod.

"I cannot wait until I graduate. I'm ready to get out of here and get on with my life. In about 15-20 years of hard work, you'll hopefully find me the biggest, richest, most famous, well-known person in the world. I don't exactly know how I will achieve this yet, but it will happen," says Olcese.

Olcese seems to be concerned about the well-being of CHS, especially the way the Saturday school is run.

"I believe Saturday school should be used for cleaning up the campus, rather than a study hall. People need to respect our campus and help keep it clean. Also, the new community-service requirement should be more localized, rather than in just any old place. Carmel itself needs a lot of work.

Also, despite what other people say, the Associative Student Body is doing a great job, and they keep getting better every year.

"It's great to see people butting a left butt to get the job done," says Olcese.

Olcese may be your all-around crazy guy, but he does have a few particular qualities to describe his perfect female: "The perfect girl for me must have blonde hair, blue eyes, she cannot be an 'airhead,' must be intelligent, semi-quiet but a party animal, works for her money but doesn't spend it like a maniac, and she must be a little taller than me," says Olcese.

When Olcese was asked what he thought about sex and AIDS, he said "I'm totally for safe sex, and I hope people remember — no love without a glove!"

Olcese's advice to the juniors: "You're going to have to want it to get it! Things don't come easy. Get the shoe back, and range on."

Apathetic students elect officers

By ANTHONY HERRO

Along with the end of the year comes finals, report cards, and the annual Associated Student Body (ASB) elections.

However, this year the election turnout was the smallest in recent history, with only the junior and freshmen with positions that were unopposed.

"I think CHS lacks school spirit," said junior class VP Lance Thompson (who also ran unopposed this semester.) "People should remember that the more you put into your school, the more you get out of it."

For the junior class, two positions were battled over for president. Incumbent Aryn Harris ran against Audrie Jones. The first time running for a position, Jones won the election and is now president. The position of treasurer was also open, and incumbent Amy Reeder ran against another first-time candidate, Paul Murphy. Reeder regained her position for the second semester.

In the freshmen class, the position of president was the only one that had two people involved. Incumbent Jamie Lawn ran against first-time runner Tami Lum. Lum won and will be freshman class president for the second semester.

The ASB wants to remind you that you can change the school. Running for a position is important and fun. So at the end of the semester when election sign ups come, write your name down and get involved.

Stanford alumnus finds a home at CHS teaching humanities classes

By JEREMY BUCK

A Stanford football and baseball freak has found a home at CHS. Being 30 years old and on his second year of teaching at CHS, Tom Clifford shows his abilities as a teacher in drama, English and American literature.

Clifford loves all of the classes that he teaches and likes to have interaction with his students. He does a good job exposing his students to new things during class and at home. He likes to be very enthusiastic. One of his favorite classes is drama, which he teaches once a day at seventh period.

The drama class put on two plays at CHS. The first was called "The Dining Play" and the second "When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet."

"I'm in charge of the whole play and setting up everything on stage," says Clifford. "Setting up a play can be very stressful, but when you're done with everything, it's great to see what you have worked so hard on."

In Clifford's plays this year, there are six actresses and seven other people that worked off-stage with the lighting and everything else. "We hope to have a lot more plays this year, and hopefully they will all be sold out like "When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet," says Clifford.

Clifford was born on July 18, 1961, in Oakland and has lived in California all his life. He went to Stanford and majored in English. His wife was from Montana originally. She is a horseback riding teacher in Carmel Valley. He has a dog also that is named Robby Thompson.

Clifford lives in Salinas right now and says, "It only takes 22 minutes on the average to get to CHS everyday with a little help of a lead foot."

In the future Clifford would like to achieve many goals. "I would like to own a small ranch in the Carmel Valley area. I would like to continue working at CHS and have a family."

Because Clifford went to Stanford, obviously he is in favor of Stanford's sports. His favorite sports are baseball and football. During the football season he generally follows every game. He goes to every Cal-Stanford game and always roots for Stanford (of course!).

Some of the teachers at CHS have bets on Stanford and Cal throughout the year, between Baseball and football. Cal was ahead this year in football in team rankings, but Stanford beat Cal at the Big Game.

"I hope to fit in more and more with CHS and to keep teaching English and drama. I also hope that we have lot more plays that will be as great as the ones before."

Padres notch 54-38 victory over Alisal

By JESUS CARDENAS

The CHS Padre basketball team got the MTAL season off to a good start with a 54-38 win, up-ending the powerful Trojans of Alisal.

The Padres knew they had to turn it up a notch in order to beat the Trojans, and that is just what they did. In the first quarter, they creamed the Trojans up and down the court to take an early 9-1 lead.

The player with the hot hand during that run was junior forward Ben Fahrer, who worked Trojan Center Jamele Taylor inside to score a "quick" eight points.

The CHS basketball team was in control throughout the whole game, on offense along with defense.

Once again the Padres were led by prime-timer Ronald Powell, Jr., who gained 17 points, seven rebounds, six assists and capped it off with 4 steals.

Forward Ben Fahrer was close behind with 16 points.

CHS basketball star named top area athlete

By ARYN HARRIS

Erica Murray, 5-foot, 9-inch senior, was last week's recipient of KMST-8 athlete of the week, an award given to athletes who make a special effort to achieve in their sport. She makes her appearance on the court this season averaging 16 points a game.

"We have a great team," said Erica. "We all work really well together."

The Padres' record stands at 11-2 in season and 3-0 in league.

Murray doesn't give herself all the credit though. Her dad always wanted her to go out and play basketball instead of watching T.V. When asked if her parents are supportive, she said, "You can hear the support."

If you have been to any of the games, her dad is almost as noticeable as she is.

During Murray's high school years, she has accumulated many awards; most improved in her junior year in basketball, all-league second team, and in the Pacific Grove tournament, won by Carmel, Erica was MVP.

Murray also has five CCS pins, one from basketball and the other four from her four years on the varsity swim team.

As for Murray's future, she wants to go to college on a scholarship and play basketball for a division 1 or 2 team. Later she hopes to succeed in the field of physical education or sports medicine.

CHS drama effort proves a smashing success

By JAMES GENONE

If you didn't catch the CHS performance of "When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet," by Charles George, you missed out on 40 great minutes of humor.

The winter one-act play, which featured outstanding directing by Tom Clifford, commanded the attention of a packed house, as six very talented actresses had the audience rolling in the aisles.

This comedy is based on a supposed meeting of William Shakespeare's most famous female characters. The personalities gather in Juliet's garden and discuss her romance with Romeo. The intent is for Juliet to receive advice from her friends, but it ends up that she is the one to advise the others on their personal lives.

The script was well-written and based on a funny idea, but good casting was needed to make the play work.

As it turned out, the casting was perfect.

Desiree Castro, as the scholarly Portia from "The Merchant of Venice," was very humorous in her role as a woman wise in the ways of romance. Katherine, from "The Taming of the Shrew," was played by Jessica Hanna. Her interpretation of a feisty and defiant woman's personality was both believable and humorous. Sara McPhee was also very realistic in her role as Desdemona from "Othello." Erin Johnson's portrayal of Juliet from "Romeo and Juliet" was appropriately innocent, just the opposite of Linnea Estes who did an excellent job with the role of the lusty Cleopatra from "Antony and Cleopatra."

All of the performances were exceptional, but Elizabeth Hill, who played the insane Ophelia from the play "Hamlet," stole the show. Her perfectly timed mad outbursts were always amusing as she rang her little bells, stared in awe at the heavens or raved to Juliet about her failed romance with Hamlet.

In addition to the outstanding acting, it was evident that a lot of work went into the directing of the play. Clifford not only put hours into rehearsals, but he also directed the making of the set and invested revenues from last year's play into new equipment.

A "thumbs-up" also goes to the dancers Desiree Castro, Robin Retherford, Julie Macaluso, Amber McFarland, Johanna Rosen and Genesta Cowen.

This play was a great production that covered every aspect of drama to near perfection. If you were unfortunate enough to miss it, keep your eyes open for the announcement of a spring performance.

ASB-teachers form mutual admiration society

By LISA ANTUZZI

It's not too often that people hear about the good things kids do. Most of the time you only hear about the trouble or problems they might cause.

CHS has been extremely proud of a group of students who work hard for the good of their fellow students, administrators and the community around them.

The Associated Student Body at CHS brought much joy to families in the community during the holiday season, when members contributed five complete Thanksgiving dinners to families who would have otherwise gone without the "traditional turkey dinner." The group also donated $500 to the Monterey Peninsula Herald Fund for needy families and delivered a full Christmas dinner, plus a decorated Christmas tree, presents and stockings to a single-parent family.

In addition, members still found time to thank the staff at CHS for all the hard work and effort they put into their jobs, sending them little presents once a month and a holiday mug at Christmastime.

"We felt that they are seldom thanked for their job of training us for our futures and we just wanted to let them know that we appreciate them and the job that they do," says ASB president Cristan Clack.

"When you have teachers who know they are appreciated by students, they'll turn around and give more energy back to the students," says ASB vice president Kelly Starrett.

However, the staff at CHS greatly appreciated all the ASB have done and feel they deserve some recognition and thanks for making the staff's jobs a bit brighter.

So they all pitched in and provided the ASB a breakfast with bagels, condiments and orange juice.

It's nice to know the good things about kids, rather than always the bad, and we thought it would be nice to show them our appreciation," says counseling secretary Linda Galuppo.

"It's nice to be remembered by the students in such a thoughtful way. It brings students and staff closer together. It's really fun getting the little surprises. Thanks ASB, we love you," says ROP secretary Marilyn Stainbrook.

"Because you're surprised by the gifts, it brightens up your day and makes you feel a little warmer towards the kids. And they need to know that what they do makes a difference in what we do," says Lynn Archer, a counselor at CHS.

In a world where people are often too busy to think about others or to stop and take time to thank those around them for something they might have done, it's nice to know that the saying "What goes around, comes around" still exists.

Disappointing record fails to tell full soccer team story

By JAMES GENONE

Despite posting two ties and three losses in league this year, the CHS soccer team has played much better than their record indicates.

Although they suffered losses to Robert Louis Stevenson, York, and King City, and tied Pacific Grove and Palma, head varsity coach Jeff Wright believes that the team is improving and beginning to form a cohesive unit.

They have preformed well on defense, with the losses being decided by narrow margins.

In the league opener against RLS, the final score tallied 1-0 in favor of RLS, with the game's only goal being scored with time running out in the fourth quarter. The team then followed with a 2-2 tie against PG in which Matt Murphy and Nate Thompson scored goals. The varsity then lost to perennial playoff powerhouse King City 2-0. In a more recent game, they lost to York 4-1, but the team was without three starters. Their last game ended in a 3-3 tie with Palma, in which Jono Spaulding scored twice and Santiago Lozano scored the other goal.

Wright cited great play in four of the games, saying that they could have gone either way. The York game was slightly one-sided after York forward Sasha Kauffman scored two goals as the second half opened and later added a third. The Palma game was nearly a win with varsity leading 3-1 at the half, but the Chieftans came back to tie it up.

Wright says most of the team's problems are on the offensive end of the field.

"We've improved our play a lot, but we're still not shooting very well," says Wright.

The lack of scoring can be attributed to the small number of good forwards and the large number of injuries.

The varsity has been using a system of two forwards and starters Matt Millan and Alex Stott have been doing well, but with little support. Millan and Stott were both recently injured and will be out indefinitely, giving the front line even more weakness.

To remedy the scoring problem, sophomore Santiago Lozano, who scored four goals in one game on the JV, was brought up to varsity before the King City game.

In addition to the weak front line, other positions are also missing players. Starting halfback and leading scorer Nate Thompson missed the York game with the flu; starting fullback Jesse Ososki has recently been in another country.

Despite inexperience, other players have been stepping up and filling in for injured players. Alex Stott has been the only successful scorer as of late, but seniors Andy Wilson, Loren Moore and sophomore Jono Spaulding have done well with starting roles.

One of the factors that has kept games close for the varsity has been the on-the-field skill of Senior Karina Shannon. Her game-to-game consistency, as well as her exceptional ball-handling ability, has caused opposing coaches to compliment Shannon's play.

"Karina is a great soccer player, not just a great female soccer player, but a great player," says Coach Wright, who points out that Shannon is better than most male players she faces.

The varsity has a number of highly skilled players, but to have any success they need to come together as a team. Hopefully someone will stand out as a leader and guide the team to a record that will better represent the team's ability.

On a different note, Wright scheduled the first annual alumni game this year and plans to continue having it every year. In the game, the alumni beat the varsity 3-2, with two alumni goals being scored by Kit Millan and the other by Ed Cullom. Varsity goals were scored by assistant coach Sergie Mindergasov and Wolfram Frier.

Bleak fan turnout fails to ignite CHS athletes to a fever-pitch

By FRANK MELICIA

This year has been a great year for the CHS athletic teams, yet the fan turnout has not been exceptional. The school needs some spirit to bring up the charisma of the team and the school in general.

For some reason students have failed to see that their presence in the stands is an important factor. Believe it or not, the crowd is a vital part of the outcome of the game. If you watch any sporting event that has a huge fan turnout who are really alive, a majority of the time the team will play at a level above their expected.

"On the court the crowd gives us incentive and gets us pumped up, so we have the edge when it comes down to crunch-time, said superstar hoopster RJ Powell. "It gets the visiting team shaken."

Nothing is sadder than to see an athletic team, or any team or club for that matter, that has no spirit. But what may be worse is to have a crowd that is dead.

CHS has a great athletic department and should be backed up more often. Just look at the records of three current varsity teams: Girls Basketball (12-2), Boys Basketball (12-4), Field Hockey (3-1-2). The school is currently ranked in the top two in all these sports. There is no reason why we should not back these teams to the fullest.

So what is the problem? Why aren't people rooting their heads off? General high school attitude.

Students feel if they support their school, they must be a dork or something, which is totally ignorant. There are many schools out there that are so much worse than ours in athletics, but who receive much more fan support.

What's the deal? We have cheerleaders trying unsuccessfully to get the crowd into it, but they're getting frustrated instead.

"It's really frustrating to try to get the school spirited when they don't seem to care," said junior cheerleader Kelli Caylor.

"It's really hard to get the crowd motivated when it seems like they don't care too much about school spirit," added colleague Lisa Antuzzi.

So what it really comes down to is to shed this ego we all have. It's really hard to get up and chant "C-H-S," but to make the teams feel important to the school and to actually raise some school spirit, we must all try to give our support.

"Momentum is the key to the game. If the crowd is yellin', screamin', that will have an effect on the game," said senior Lee.

A majority of the crowd are athletes of other sports and feel the same as the players, but still are hesitant to get rowdy.

If you seniors and juniors remember right, the 1989-90 basketball team was awesome. The crowd as the rowdiest in the league, and we took pride in that. I feel, and so do many other athletes and students, that in order for the atmosphere to change at this school, we must gain some confidence and pride in our school.

Pride in your school fosters pride in general. It gives you pride in yourself and in everything you do. This will show when you do anything; school work, a job, sports, anything.

So when you go to your next sporting event, go to cheer your team and represent your school. It's important.

CHS senior somehow does it all

By LANCE THOMPSON

High school, we all know how the hard classes and tedious nights of homework can bog us down. Add a sport to all that and we're really talking responsibility.

Just imagine honors classes, wrestling, football and work. Who could do all that and still maintain a level of excellence in all of the above? Senior Dominic Petrocelli, that's who.

For four years he has been on the high honor roll, while playing two of the most grueling sports and working at the Carmel Drugstore. Petrocelli has learned how to fit all this in.

"It's really hard to budget your time," says Petrocelli, "You have to learn to organize your schedule to fit your needs."

One of his greatest attributes is his ability to use time to its fullest and never waste a minute. "There is always time to do something. Whenever I sit down, I think to myself, is there anything I could be doing? I feel that everyone has enough time to do all that they want. They just don't use all the time they have."

Petrocelli has completely "dominated" his respective sports. In football he was a team captain, playing not only both ways but on all special teams as well. Not to mention his awards for Most Valuable Player, scholar athlete, and he was named second team all-league this year.

On the wrestling team, he is also captain and has been awarded most improved, most pins. He qualified for C.C.S. as a junior. Although the 1992 season is still under way, his record proves that Petrocelli will earn more honors this year.

Coaches and players alike find Petrocelli's intensity and determination unmatched:

"I personally haven't seen Dom wrestle, but from what I've heard he is incredible. And from the awesome way I've seen him play football, I believe it," says Coach Mike Woody.

"When you're playing in a game and you know Dom's on your team, you have a secure feeling, like when you make the tackle, Dom will be there with you no matter what," says junior Jeff Saunders.

"When Domonic Petrocelli wants something, he goes out and gets it," says senior Robbie Hayes.

Petrocelli's success in both sports has led him to find similarities in the two. "They both involve a lot of technique and coordination," says Petrocelli. "Weight and leverage have a lot to do with both football and wrestling."

With his cumulative GPA of 3.9, this scholar-athlete plans to attend Cal Poly and become an engineer. If all goes well, he would like to compete in either or both sports at a college level.

Aside from engineering he would also like to coach. Petrocelli sees the importance of what he learned from sports. "I would like to put back into the system what I got out of it," he says with a smile.

As advice to the future athlete or employee or scholar or all of the above, Petrocelli adds this: "You have to always have competitiveness. Stick with it and NEVER ever give up!"

It's worth getting up a little earlier to get your body in shape

By ADAM CHAPLAN

Every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and sometimes on Saturday, at 6:15 in the morning, anyone willing to shell out $30 a month is welcome to work out under Coach John Able's supervision.

The monthly, fee-based program is for young people who want to build up muscles, get in shape, or just increase muscle tone.

"You have to pay the price to maximize your body," said Ables, who also conditions the Padres' football team.

Students involved in the program admit that it's hard work.

"Even though it's a pain in the neck to get up in the early morning, it's better because it gives me more time to study and do my homework after school," said senior David Bernhard.

Coach Ables is always there to help and always has his sense of humor that you just have to laugh at.

The fact that you get up so early may discourage you from wanting to try it, but it really is better for you and your body as well.

First of all, it wakes you up pretty quick while you're under the bench press, and doing your leg presses. Secondly, it's good to workout early if you're currently playing a sport. It gives you the whole day to rest your muscles and your entire body for whatever sport you're playing.

"My main goal for this program is to build up everyone's muscles and to help everybody's body be able to overcome injuries, and play with a more aggressive attitude," said Ables.

So if you're interested in the program, be sure to contact Coach Ables or the main office.
